ENGLAND TO BUY COLONIES

Serbia Restored, Too, and Balkan Question to be Negotiated.

TRIESTE A FREE PORT

Disarmament and the Creation of an International Police Force Among Proposals.

CALLED KUEHLMANN'S PLAN

Has Been in Circulation in Embassies at Washington for Two Weeks.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—What purports to be an outline of Germany's peace terms has been circulated among diplomats here within the last two weeks, but has been regarded by the Entente embassies and most of the neutrals as a "feeler."

The origin of the so-called terms was not disclosed, but they are said to have been written by Foreign Secretary von Kuhlmann before his visit to Vienna, which since has been pointed to as strengthening the probability that they bear evidences of authenticity.

Briefly, the so-called terms were as follows:

Restoration of Belgium and northern France, to be paid for out of the sale of Germany's colonies to Great Britain.

Alsace and Lorraine to be independent States. (High French officials recently have stated anew the determination of France to be satisfied with nothing less than the recovery of her lost provinces.)

Trieste to be a "free port."

Serbia and Rumania to be restored, and Serbia to have a port on the Adriatic.

The Balkan question and the status of Turkey to be subjects for negotiation.

Disarmament and international police.

Freedom of the seas, with Great Britain in control of the English Channel until the projected tunnel is built between Dover and Calais.

This outline of terms, circulated without definite stamp of official authority, it will be noted, bears in many respects a resemblance to the general tenor of the peace proposals of Pope Benedict.

By some diplomats such an outline is regarded as presenting something susceptible of discussion. It is discussed merely as a possibility, without having yet advanced fully into the range of probability.

Germans Intent on Belgium's Fate.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9.—The weekend brought a number of references in the German press or official declaration to Belgium, Alsace-Lorraine, and Poland, which may foreshadow progress, or lack of progress, in Germany toward solutions of these questions for insertion in the reply of Germany to Pope Benedict's peace proposal.

Regarding Belgium, statements by Berlin correspondents of the Amsterdam Catholic organ, the Tijd, and the Vienna Catholic organ, the Reichspost, on the proposal to give Belgium "complete autonomy," subject to limitations to prevent it entering into special treaty relations with the Entente powers or maintaining a military force beyond that required for interior policies, or to upset the German-made division of the country into Walloon and Flemish halves, have attracted the attention of the German press.

The Lokal-Anzeiger assumes that this represents the Centrists' solution of the situation, but it says the Tijd's further assertion that the proposal has been accepted in principle by the "Double Seven" Commission in Germany is premature.

A statement in the South German Catholic organ, the Augsburg Post, declaring that the time had come for a frank declaration that the German people have not thought of oppressing Belgium economically, politically, or militarily, also is attracting attention. The meeting of the "Double Seven" Committee in Berlin perhaps will show whether the above represents the Centrists' conception of a fulfillment of the Post's wishes.

Not Agreed as to Alsace-Lorraine.

Dr. Michaelis, in an interview published in Stuttgart, shows that the Federated Governments are not yet united, as has been assumed, on the idea of creating Alsace-Lorraine into a hereditary monarchical State, but that some of them are still toying with the old idea of dividing the provinces between Prussia, Bavaria, and Baden, Prussia to retain control of the part of prime military importance and the most valuable mining districts, while her two partners undertake the task of assimilating the population of the southern section, for which it is thought they are better fitted than Prussia.

The solution of the Polish question is to be announced in a few days. It will begin with the institution of a regency of uncertain powers and the abo-

Michaelis Forecasts Speedy Statement of Terms; Joint Committee May Draft Reply to Pope Today

LONDON, Sept. 9.—That Germany would soon be able to publish her peace terms was the statement made by Dr. Michaelis, the German Chancellor, in an interview, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today.

"The Main Committee," said Dr. Michaelis in the interview, had "tried to make final arrangements regarding peace conditions and the question of Alsace-Lorraine, but no decision has yet been taken. The question, however, was eagerly discussed, and Germany will soon be able to publish her peace terms."

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9.—The committee of seven members of the Reichstag and seven members of the Bundesrat, appointed to draw up an answer to Pope Benedict's peace note, will meet on Monday afternoon, and the reply will probably be drafted then, says a Berlin dispatch.

SOCIALISTS BLOCK NEW RIBOT CABINET

SCANDAL AIDED DOWNFALL

Bonnet Rouge Case Blamed in Part for Collapse of the Recent Government.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Premier Ribot late tonight gave up the task of endeavoring to reform his Ministry, owing to the refusal of the members of the Socialist Party to collaborate with him.

Antonin Dubost, President of the Senate, and Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, returned to Paris yesterday, and thereupon M. Ribot placed the resignation of the Ministry in the hands of President Poincaré.

After conferring with the heads of the legislative bodies, the President asked M. Ribot to form a new Ministry. M. Ribot accepted the task, and it was expected that he would complete his task tonight.

M. Ribot went to work early this morning and by noon had conferences with the Minister of Marine, M. Chaumet; the Minister of War, M. Painlevé, and the Minister of Munitions, M. Thomas, all of whom, it was asserted, seemed likely to retain their old portfolios.

During the afternoon M. Ribot had further conferences with other persons in an endeavor to harmonize the situation, but apparently without success.

M. Ribot had completed his list of Ministers when at the last moment the Socialist Party refused to collaborate. This involved the withdrawal of Albert Thomas, Minister of Munitions, one of the pillars of the combination.

M. Ribot at first decided to continue in office, but M. Painlevé asserted that it would be impossible to do so without the participation of the Socialists. M. Ribot, accordingly, notified President Poincare that he definitely gave up the mission.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 9. — "The Almeyreda scandal is its backdrop and war is its setting," says the Figaro of the ministerial drama now being enacted here. This sums up the causes of the Cabinet's resignation. On the one side there is a wide feeling that it has not possessed sufficient "Lloyd George energy," the sentiment being similar to that which led to the downfall of the Asquith régime. On the other hand the Bonnet Rouge affair has, many think, compromised it in the eyes of the public more than the politicians imagine.

The radical Socialist Party is the strongest in the chamber, counting 100 members and voting practically solid. Of this group, M. Malvy, as Minister of the Interior, was the chief Cabinet representative. The position came to him on the retirement of the previous leader, Joseph Caillaux, owing to the murder of Calmette.

It is an axion of French politics that the radical Socialists have the portfolio of the Interior, which has an influence on national elections of no small importance through its appointment of prefects and other local officials. But if the country is opposed to the idea of a radical Socialist in that post, and the Government cannot hold a majority in the chamber save on that condition, the dilemma of the prospective Premier is obvious.

What the country thinks on the first point seems to depend on two questions: First, whom does it regard as the real leader of the radical Socialist Party; second, whom does it regard as the protagonist in France of what is termed a "white peace." Should the name in both cases be identical, it is not difficult to understand why a steady Republican weekly, L'Opinion, said yesterday:

"The present political crisis," says the Figaro, "has political and moral importance far greater than usual in such affairs. It is not merely a change of government that is in question, but a fundamental alteration of methods by which our governments are formed."

The opening paragraphs of Mr. Herve's editorial go further on the same line: "We must have a Minister of Interior who allows the Central De-

PETROGRAD BEGINS CIVIL EVACUATION

MEETING ENDS IN QUARREL

Their Land Program and Attitude on Ukraine Denounced, Socialists Leave the Room.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 9.—While orders have been given for the partial evacuation of the civilian population of Petrograd, a measure rendered necessary by the approach of the war zone to the capital, and a special commission is being formed for the government of the city, a new Cabinet crisis has broken out as a result of the opposition of the Constitutional Democratic Ministers to the food program of M. Pieschehonoff, Minister of Supplies, and also the land policy of M. Tchernoff, Minister of Agriculture, as well as to the attitude of a majority of the Cabinet towards the Ukraine.

The Constitutional Democrats demanded the postponement of consideration of M. Pieschehonoff's program until the controversy over the land policy was settled. This the Minister of Supplies declared to be impossible, in view of the urgency of the question. The Constitutional Democrats then required essential changes in the proposed measures, which M. Pieschehonoff, with the support of all the Socialist Ministers, refused to make. On the Constitutional Democratic Ministers announcing that they might resign, M. Pieschehonoff, in order to prevent a most serious situation, resigned himself and persisted, despite Premier Kerensky's appeal, absenting himself from the night session of the Cabinet.

During the session the crisis was aggravated by the Constitutional Democratic Ministers declaring categorically against the Government's intention to sanction Vinnichenko, the Ukranian Secessionist leader, as Chief of the Ukraine Cabinet. The debate took on such a sharp character that the Socialist Ministers left the room and the session was interrupted.

Explaining the Evacuation.

M. Nikitine, Minister of Posts and Telegraph, who has been charged by the Government with the task of partially evacuating the capital, in a statement explains that the partial evacuation is due to the problem of the food supply rather than to any military menace. The only result of the German advance, he says, is further to complicate the food question. He advises that section of the population not engaged in business to leave the city in batches, and promises every facility for their departure.

It is said that a majority of the Ministers are against removing the Government into the interior; first, because they do not consider the capital endangered, and second, because this might cause an unreasonable panic. In any case, it is said the Government will take no steps for six weeks.

Today is the semi-anniversary of the revolution, and an observance of it along violent lines had been threatened by the Maximalists. The chief feature of the Maximalist plan was some sort of a demonstration by the army against the Provisional Government, to which end the Extremists have conducted an energetic propaganda among the garrison of the capital. Meetings had been held at Kronstadt, at which the soldiers declared they would come to Petrograd with the watchword "Bread and Peace" to "avenge the events of July 17-18."

The preparations seriously alarmed the capital, and the uneasiness was increased by the fact that several Petrograd regiments received orders to leave the capital, but General Vassilkovski, the military Governor, reassured the council that this was not a punitive measure.

The General posted a proclamation appealing to the inhabitants to remain calm and assuring them that any attempt at violence would be suppressed without mercy. Simultaneously the Soldiers' and Workmen's organization, which is holding forty meetings at various points throughout Russia today to observe the anniversary and raise funds for the organization's use, made public an appeal in which it was declared that "those who invite the workmen and soldiers to come out armed into the streets are agents-provocateurs and enemies of the revolution, which they wish to drown in blood."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Sept. 9.—The Russian débâcle is the occasion of an important inspired appeal in today's Corriere della Sera for the intervention of the Japanese Army.

"It is well nigh incredible," it says, "that the Entente Powers should actually be postponing supreme battles in order to await the arrival of troops of a great nation overseas which started only a few months ago to transform its commercial population into soldiers, whereas the Entente Powers have been steadily declining during the last three years the use of a strong, well equipped army endowed with perhaps the most martial spirit on earth. There will come a time when this missed opportunity of Japanese aid will be considered the worst error of the Allies.

"There are no insurmountable material difficulties, for the same ships which are to convey to Europe the soldiers of the Stars and Stripes could have brought across those of the Rising Sun. It is not needful to know the secrets of diplomacy to divine that the leading allied States feared they would have to pay too heavy a price for Far Eastern help. They have not reflected that a speedier victory would have been won and that the saving of innumerable lives and immense sums of money would have largely compensated them for the granting of territory or the addition of prestige to our valiant ally.

"What, alas! they have done is to apply to the tremendous tragedy of the world war habits contracted by Governments, the bad old habits of half measures and temporizing contracted by Governments formed on a Parliamentary basis. Not a single responsible statesman among the Allies has had the timely insight to urge a straightforward bid for Japan's intervention, while nobody of eminence in the political world has shown himself capable of wrenching from the Entente so salutary a measure."

Submarines Sank 4,561,000 Tons of Shipping in Last Eight Months

Maximum Reached in April and Approached in June—Only 20 U-Boats Operate in Atlantic at a Time—American Destroyers Successfully Meeting the Menace.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—In view of the American peculiarity of being able to put forth the best efforts when the people know what they are up against, certain facts about the submarine campaign, which now constitutes the most menacing phase of Germany's attack on world civilization, are herewith given. They can be relied on as accurate. It is not thought necessary to deal in figures below thousands.

Following, in terms of tonnage, are the monthly sinkings by German submarines from January to August inclusive, the figures being for the Allies and neutrals in the aggregate, but not including raider losses and ships damaged or beached but not sunk. The weekly averages are given for purposes of comparison:

Month.	Total Tonnage.	Sunk Weekly.
January (four weeks)	833,000	83,000
February (four weeks)	479,000	120,000
March (five weeks)	900,000	120,000
April (four weeks)	788,000	197,000
May (four weeks)	549,000	137,000
June (five weeks)	758,000	152,000
July (four weeks)	463,000	116,000
August (five weeks)	591,000	118,000
Total	4,561,000

Against the loss of about four and a half million tons in eight months new construction is estimated at less than a million tons, leaving the net loss to allied and neutral shipping at about three and a half million tons. The loss to American shipping is said to have been less than one-half of 1 per cent.

American Help Urgently Needed.

While the decline in the shipping loss in July and August was substantial, it cannot be regarded as satisfactory, and the situation continues to call for the kind of activity demanded by a great emergency. America's opportunity for service lies more immediately and urgently in the direction of putting down the submarine menace than even in sending soldiers to France, all-important as that is. In fact, these two matters are inseparably connected.

As submarine attack and defense are reduced to a business, a good deal of mystery surrounding the war under water is clearing up and commonplace facts are becoming known. The popular mind pictures the waters off the British coast as swarming with submarines. It is a matter of general knowledge in naval circles now that the number of German submarines in the Atlantic Ocean never exceeds twenty and that the number operating in the North Atlantic off the British coast does not exceed ten. These figures do not include submarines engaged exclusively in minelaying.

It is estimated in the best British naval circles that Germany has not built as many as 300 submarines altogether, and that about 150 of all conditions are in existence today.

U-Boats Need Frequent Repairs.

The U-boat is of very delicate mechanism and needs frequent repairing, which, in the main, explains the small number operating in the Atlantic and elsewhere. Most of the boats are being repaired or replenished constantly and out of commission.

Still another reason is the difficulty in getting crews and keeping them going. The work is so hard and the dangers are so constant that officers and crews peter out. After a few months the men lose their appetite and cannot sleep.

The internal arrangements of a submarine are such as to make life on one of them extremely trying. Plumbing fixtures, kitchens and eating facilities are jumbled together, and ventilation is necessarily bad. It is very difficult to maintain whole crews in service.

Another difficulty and one constantly increasing is the shortage of material for torpedoes. Wild shots are much more frequent than formerly.

The multiplication of destroyers has greatly increased the nerve-racking character of submarine duty. U-boat navigators are deathly afraid of the destroyers, with their speed, guns and depth bombs. The presence of destroyers and other patrol boats in force in the English Channel explains the immunity of transports which have carried millions of soldiers back and forth between France and England without serious loss.

Cannot Raid in Companies.

Another submarine weakness which impedes operation and shakes the nerves of U-boat men is the blindness of their craft. When submerged they cannot see, and there have been many collisions. For this reason they cannot operate in companies, which furnishes still another explanation of the small number utilized.

"As is well known, the submarine, when submerged, must keep in motion, as it cannot otherwise maintain its equilibrium. When it stops it is liable to "up-end."

It is clear, therefore, that the submarine campaign, as it now stands, is one depending upon hysterical courage. Germany lashed herself into a spasm-like fury in the early months of last Winter, and the peak of her effort was reached in April, when the sinkings aggregated about 200,000 tons a week. In order to accomplish this extraordinary result extraordinary means were used which it was impossible to sustain in subsequent months. The comparatively low figures of July and August represent, to some extent, the reaction from the high pitch of energy in April.

There are many reasons for believing, however, that the Germans are preparing for a new burst of effort. They are thought to be concentrating all their naval potentialities in constructing and manning U-boats which, so far as possible, will overcome the weaknesses made manifest by experience.

Sims's Aid to Convoy System.

England learned to cope with the initial activities of the submarine, and when the danger of this menace had been solved by the British Admiralty, Germany addressed herself to the development of a submarine campaign that could be carried further out to sea and so escape various forms of counter-attack that England had been using. When she was ready for the new campaign she was able to operate for several months against an unprepared enemy, and, indeed, it was not until America sent a destroyer fleet that the thorough convoy system as now organized could be attempted.

While it is too early for optimistic views or the outcome, one hears on all hands in London expressions of gratification at what the United States has done, and especially at the continued energetic measures which Secretary Daniels has taken in protecting allied shipping against the submarine. These measures are the basis upon which rests the main hope in naval circles here of solving the problem.

There is much that America can still do out of her great resources, but her action already has been vigorous and telling. The vessels now maintained by the United States are said to constitute a large proportion of the anti-submarine forces in the Atlantic.

Expect Change in January.

There is much gratified comment here on the action of Washington in placing increased orders for the construction of destroyers, and the period subsequent to Jan. 1, 1918, is looked forward to confidently. The next four months are necessarily to be a time of anxiety and America is relied upon fully to employ her superb energy and resourcefulness in protecting allied interests during that dangerous period.

It is remarked here that, barring the scare it might give to a few seaboard cities, nothing better could happen from the viewpoint of submarine defense than for Germany to divert some of her undersea craft to America. U-boats operating off the coast of Ireland get at shipping where it is concentrated, whereas in American waters it is scattered. Unfortunately, despite the reports printed in some American newspapers, there is no danger that Germany will commit such a blunder.

The principle of the convoy system has been soundly established by the experience of the last few months. Naval authorities hold that it is clear that shipping can be protected by escorting vessels. It is only a matter of having enough cruisers and destroyers. With an adequate number of these vessels the destruction of shipping can be reduced to the point of new construction, and whenever that is done Germany will bite the dust.

DESTROYERS THE ANSWER.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Naval officers intimately identified with our overseas operations agree with the statement made by Charles H. Grasty in his London dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES that the U-boat menace will be ended when there are enough cruisers and destroyers available to convoy all ships.

Providing destroyers is considered the crux of the situation. The experience of both British and American naval officers actually engaged in the quest of the German undersea boat is that the destroyer is the deadliest foe of the submarine, and for this reason the Navy Department is concentrating on the construction of as many destroyers

SWEDISH ENVOY AT BUENOS AIRES DENIES HIS LEGATION SENT GERMAN DISPATCHES; DISCLOSURES SHOCK ARGENTINE CAPITAL

Akerhielm, Swedish Charge at Washington, Insists Lansing Told Him Messages Were in German Code

Baron E. Akerhielm, Chargé d'Affaires of the Swedish Legation in the United States, who arrived in New York yesterday from Washington, requested The Associated Press to make public the following statement:

"The statement I made yesterday to a representative of the press has not been quite correctly reproduced in the papers.

"The main point, as far as Sweden is concerned, has been entirely lost.

"I especially wished to have pointed out that when I saw the Secretary of State Saturday, I was told that the telegrams that were forwarded by the Swedish Minister-Resident at Buenos Aires for the German Chargé d'Affaires were in German code. This is sufficient proof that the Swedish Minister-Resident did not know their contents."

DIPLOMATIC COUP SURPRISES LONDON

British Express Astonishment That America Got the Luxburg Messages.

RECALL ZIMMERMANN NOTE

Dispatch of Cipher Telegrams from England to Sweden May Now Be Prohibited.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 10. — The Washington State Department's revelation of a Swedish diplomat in Argentina acting as an intermediary for transferring German messages to Berlin has caused one of the greatest international sensations of the war. The development itself is not, however, a great surprise, the chief surprise being that the American officials were able to obtain the messages, as they did the Zimmermann note of last Winter regarding German overtures to Mexico.

There had been no fresh developments here in Swedish affairs up to late last night. The Swedish Minister, Count Wrangel, who was out of town, paid a hurried visit to the Legation yesterday, but disavowed any knowledge of the Argentine matter beyond what he had read in the newspapers.

At the British Foreign Office no news had been received either from Stockholm or from Buenos Aires which would throw fresh light on the situation, and the next move is expected from the Swedish Government. It is reported as probable that the dispatch of cipher telegrams to Sweden will be stopped with the exception of Count Wrangel's messages.

Sweden's Leanings Known.

The Swedish Government, with the monarchy, the aristocracy, and the army officers, has been rated strongly pro-German throughout the war, and Queen Victoria in several public utterances has proclaimed her German sentiments as strongly as any German could. The Swedish people, on the other hand, are reported as leaning strongly against Germany in the more recent stages of the war, particularly since the unrestricted submarine campaign began.

Sweden's leaning toward Germany was considered a natural complement to her old fear of the Russian autocracy, but the Entente nations held the hope that when the cause for that distrust was removed by the revolution Swedish feelings might undergo a radical change.

The suspicion has been current in England throughout the war that Germany was obtaining much information of military movements which could not be procured through ordinary spies, the spy industry, in fact, having been pretty well stamped out here for more than a year past, after a few lessons taught by several executions in the Tower of London. The belief that Lord Kitchener's death when the Hampshire went down was the result of information transmitted to Germany of his departure has been persistent with many, and it has at least the foundation that his plans were known and discussed at dinner tables in high society before he started.

American Diplomatic Skill.

Compliments to American diplomacy for the skill displayed in obtaining the messages are a part of all the comment on the affair. Incidentally there is much discussion as to whether, in view of the British and Argentine experiences with Sweden, the right of sending code messages should be given to neutral diplomats during the war.

This identical question arose in Japan during the Russo-Japanese war when Germany sent a military mission headed by a Hohenzollern prince to the Japanese Army. The mission contended that international courtesy and the princely rank of its chief required that its correspondence be transmitted without censorship. This was granted, but against the judgment of most of the officers at the front, who thought that no uncensored correspondence should go from the army in the field, and some of whom suspected that even if the prince was not virtually an observer for Russia his reports would reach Russia by way of Berlin.

"The discovery and deciphering of the present series of telegrams is due to the watchfulness and skill of the American Intelligence Service," says The Sunday Observer in its article on the exposure of Swedish activity in connection with the transmission of German official

CAPITAL AWAITS SWEDEN'S REPLY

Argentina Expected to Take Action on the Disclosures Made by Lansing.

KNOTTY POINTS TO EXPLAIN

Excuse That Legation Did Not Know Contents of Messages Is Not Acceptable.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Official and diplomatic Washington talked of nothing else today than the disclosure made yesterday by Secretary Lansing of the duplicity of the Swedish Legation at Buenos Aires in sending military and other unneutral information to the German Government under cover of the Swedish diplomatic cipher code.

All those interested are waiting for action by Argentina which they are confident will not be long delayed. Their interest is aroused also over the character of explanation that will be made by the Swedish Government, which, while not directly accused by the Secretary of State, must indicate whether it was a party to the violation of one of the most sacred obligations of a neutral nation.

As far as the United States is concerned it has had its say—for the present. It has made known to the world how the Swedish Legation at Buenos Aires has violated international law and has exposed to Argentina the manner in which its hospitality has been abused by Count Luxburg, the German Chargé d'Affaires. It has called the conduct of the Swedish Legation to the attention of the Swedish Government, and left to the opinion of the world the question whether that Government was a party to the questionable transaction in which its diplomatic representative at Buenos Aires was implicated.

America's Part Is Done.

No further action by this Government is necessary until it has received answers from Argentina and Sweden. Both will be called upon by the demands of courtesy to acknowledge the receipt from the State Department of the copies of the secret German communications which the Swedish Legation cabled to the Foreign Office at Stockholm, addressed to the German Government.

There is expectation here that Argentina will act quickly. The affront to its dignity by the German chargé is too great to permit any delay. Argentina, it is believed, will dismiss Count Luxburg instanter, leaving to future exchanges with Berlin the question of the continuance or severance of relations between Argentina and Germany. Outside of Count Luxburg's more serious offense, he cannot remain in Argentina after it has become known that he informed his Government that the Argetine Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs "is a notorious ass and Anglophile."

For Argentina the matter is of extreme seriousness in view of the fact that she has been on the verge of hostilities with Germany and has only recently effected a settlement produced by German assurances to grant immunity to Argentine merchant vessels carrying food to neutral countries. This newest disclosure of German offensiveness is bound to revive the embers of Argentine resentment, which have hardly had time to die out.

Argentina is likely also to dismiss Baron Lowen, the Swedish Minister. It was said in a Swedish quarter that he had been sick, and the suggestion from this was that he could not have had any personal knowledge of crooked work on the part of somebody connected with his legation acting in behalf of the German chargé. But under the rule that usually pertains in diplomatic affairs, Baron Lowen is responsible and cannot escape under the plea that he was ignorant of what was going on.

Problem for Baron Lowen.

Not one, but at fewest three unneutral dispatches containing military information of benefit to Germany were sent by the Swedish Legation at Buenos Aires to Berlin via Stockholm. These covered a space of two months and Baron Lowen will have difficulty in explaining how he was able to keep him-

BARON LOWEN SURPRISED

"I Have Cabled My Government to Clear Up Matters," He Says.

CALLS US 'VERY EXCITABLE.'

PRESS TAKES GRAVE VIEW

Count Luxburg, German Charge Who Signed Cables, Still Is Away on Vacation.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 9.—The Swedish Minister to Argentina, Baron Lowen, today denied that dispatches in cipher had been sent to Berlin by the German Chargé through the Swedish Legation at Buenos Aires. He declared:

"I have not sent, nor caused to be sent, by the Legation under my charge, any telegram from the German Legation. The news is a great and disagreeable surprise.

"I have cabled to my Government to clear up matters. In the United States they are very excitable."

The official announcement issued by the State Department at Washington that communications from Count Luxburg, German Chargé at Buenos Aires, had been sent to the Berlin Foreign Office through the Swedish Legation here in cipher caused a sensation and was the principal topic of discussion throughout the city.

Situation Considered Serious.

That the situation is considered serious was evidenced by the fact that the populace, usually gay on Sunday, were remarkably quiet and sober-faced. Dancing girls, waving Argentine flags and bedecked with American and British flags, were greeted with silence at the society matinée after being wildly applauded all week.

The Government offices have been closed since Friday evening, but when the officials return from the week-end tomorrow the revelations from Washington will be the first matter considered. The President of the republic has already called upon the Foreign Minister for explanations.

The Buenos Aires newspapers refer to the exposure as an unusual and sensational diplomatic scandal. La Nacion says:

"This sensational revelation, which compromises the faith of the German Foreign Office, must modify many opinions regarding the situation. It clearly shows the contempt with which the two diplomats involved regard the Argentine Foreign Office.

Far-Reaching in Effects.

"Diplomacy in this war has given us many surprises, but none so grave, or that has occasioned consequences so difficult to foresee in their far-reaching effects, as this from the United States, the involvement of the fair name of our country, imposed upon because of its excessive good faith, in a complicated plot, which must arouse universal comment of all kinds, claims, fears, and suspicions."

Every paper today said that the report was so sensational and unusual that it could not be believed except for the fact that it had been made public by the State Department of such a great country as the United States.

At the present time there are no responsible officials at the German Legation. Count Luxburg has been taking a vacation in the Andes foothills since the arrival of the American fleet at Buenos Aires, and has so far not responded to a telegraphic request of The Associated Press to make a statement.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The denial of Baron Lowen, the Swedish Minister at Buenos Aires, that he sent through his Legation any telegram from the German Legation caused no great surprise here today. It was said in Swedish quarters here yesterday that the Baron had been ill for many months and probably was ignorant of what had been going on at the Legation.

Swedish-German Air Service Is Now Under Arrangement

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Copenhagen says reports from Stockholm are to the effect that a committee has been formed to arrange for an airplane route from Trelleborg, southern Sweden, to Sassnitz, Germany.

Foreign Office, as revealed by the statement issued by Secretary Lansing yesterday. Mr. Ekengren is at his Summer residence here.

"I did not know anything about this whatever until I read it in the newspapers today," said Minister Ekengren. "It is all entirely new to me. The Swedish Legation here has nothing to do with the business of the Legation in Argentina, and none of the dispatches referred to in Mr. Lansing's statement went through our hands. As I have already said, I have no knowledge of this matter, except from the newspapers, and, therefore, can make no comment on it."

The Minister plans to leave for Washington within a day or two.

GERMAN WORK IN ARGENTINA.

They Have Spent Much Money There—Tried to Block Our Trade.

A confidential official report made recently to the Foreign Office of one of the allied nations reveals that the German Government has conducted a most active propaganda in Argentina, spending large amounts of money to buy and influence newspapers, and that an extensive campaign had been mapped out to block the development of United States trade in Argentina after the war.

The report gives several letters intercepted by allied censors, showing the details of the campaign for Argentine sympathy.

"The French censor, for example," the report says, "has intercepted packets of war photographs to the Legation at Rio, which were being forwarded as diplomatic documents, exempt from customs duties, &c. These were intended for distribution to the local press."

Referring to the action of a part of the South American press in co-operating in the German propaganda for pay, the report states:

"It is interesting to note that the propagandist agency, managed by Attenberger of Zurich is in correspondence with South America. Last year various organizations at Montevideo, which had amalgamated to form the 'Centro Germania,' applied to this agency for financial assistance. The reply was interesting as illustrating the importance of the Transocean, (a German news bureau.) The Zurich society stated that they were short of funds, and that application should be made to the Transocean which had undertaken to coordinate and regulate propaganda throughout the world, not only during the war but in coming years. This is a point worth noting. Propaganda in South America seems to aim far less at influencing the inhabitants on questions relating to the war—that is merely a means to the end—than at securing for Germany an unassailable position in the sphere of trade and economic development. It is for this reason that German banks, merchants, and shippers are affording every assistance to the propagandist associations in their task of championing Deutschtum in South America."

In the list of papers favorable to Germany in Argentina the report lists in Buenos Aires Argentinisches Wochenblatt, Boletin Germanico, Germania, and Union.

The report prints a letter from a German propagandist in South America to Government officials in Berlin. The letter, translated, read in part:

"When normal relations are restored, (at present mail is not even straying,) I hope to hear more from you about the propaganda to be carried on here, and I will then let you have addresses of such firms and individuals as have interests connected with German commerce, industry, &c.

"Monthly papers with sufficient matter on the development of the army, fleet, industry, colonies, finance, trade statistics, aerial news, inventions, are eagerly read, and this kind of publication, through the busy German bookshops, with their many agents in South America, will be sure to find a large circle of subscribers. Of course, the Review must have coworkers in all the Latin-American States who will deliver articles of general interest on the happenings in South America, &c.

"The Foreign Office might perhaps be ready to support such an undertaking financially by means of German papers which are conducted exclusively in the interests of German trade, industry, politics, and scientific pursuits should be established in the language of the country in all chief towns where such have not been called into existence by the war. (Union, Buenos Aires; Diario da Rio. Rio de Janeiro, &c.) These papers also would perhaps need financial aid.

RAIN AND FOG PALL HIDES ISONZO FIGHT

Italians, Using Searchlights by Day, Continue Their Strong Attacks.

PLAINS ARE LAKES OF MUD

Gen. Grandina Tells of the Army's Development Since Italy Entered War.

ROME, Sept. 9.—Bad weather is interfering with operations on the Isonzo front. Violent storms have transformed peaceful streams into torrents, torrents into river, and plains into lakes of mud. Mist and fog shut off visibility, even at short distances, despite the use of searchlights by day.

Notwithstanding these conditions, the cannonade continues, while raiding parties make daring dashes to snatch minor positions from the enemy. Each party brings back a certain number of prisoners belonging to regiments just arrived from the Russo-Rumanian front. Some Austrian gunners who have been captured declare they have been brought from the western front.

Today's War Office statement reads:

Northeast of Gorizia, (the Monte San Gabriele region,) the artillery battle is continuing without cessation.

On the remainder of the front there were the usual partol actions and artillery fire.

Difficulties, some of them almost insuperable, which have been successfully overcome by Italy in her prosecution of the war were outlined by General Grandina, Minister of War, in a statement to The Associated Press.

"In order to appreciate fully the importance of Italy's military efforts," he said, "it must be borne in mind that she entered the war at a moment when the position of the Central Powers was so strong that intervention against them could no longer be deferred. That moment was most inopportune for Italy, however, as she lacked officers, artillery, and supplementary services, so that greater efforts were required to bring the efficiency of the army up to the standard necessary to triumph over a formidable enemy's resistance.

"Austria is an important element in the resistance of the Central Powers. Her troops have splendid qualities of courage, tenacity, and physical resistance. These forces now on our front are twice as numerous as at the beginning of the war, not counting the forces of Germany, which has concentrated on our front two-thirds of her best artillery, with abundant munitions. Naturally the increased number of troops on our front has been advantageous to our allies.

"Our front, measuring 406 miles, equals that defended by France, England, and Belgium combined. Although it is mountainous, it requires a large number of troops owing to the necessity of protecting the important regions behind. Its mountainous character has necessitated greater efforts for the construction of roads, lodgings, and fortifications, intensifying all services and requiring infinitely more arduous work than if the war were being fought on level grounds.

"These efforts can better be understood when it is explained that since the beginning of the war Italy has more than doubled the forces of infantry, bersaglieri, and Alpine troops, organized powerful siege artillery, created absolutely new types of artillery, consisting of hundreds of batteries of heavy guns, mule-carried batteries, trench mortars, and numerous anti-aerial batteries, both stable and movable, besides having doubled the field artillery. The number of engineers and sappers has been quadrupled, and other sections greatly augmented. There have been organized thousands of sections of ordinary machine guns and quick-firing rifles, as wellas new specialties, like flame throwers and gas ejectors. The military aviation forces have been tripled since the commencement of the war in the mountains.

"The necessities of life of a large military population fighting in the mountains require special departments such as cable transports, means of shelter, and special supplies of food and clothing, taking 250 mules for each infantry regiment and 200 for each Alpine battalion besides thousands for the transport of projectiles, for engineers and for sanitary trains, bringing the total number of quadrupeds in use up to 400,000.

"Heights of nearly 10,000 feet have been reached not only by mountain artillery but by field artillery and even by siege batteries dragged up more than 8,500 feet. Three-fifths of our front is more than 6,000 feet above the sea level and therefore it is obvious what an enormous expenditure of energy is necessary for the transport of all the necessities of life into places where even mules cannot penetrate in Winter. When operations on a grand scale are impossible in cold weather the unceasing vigilance continues, attended by the terrible struggle against the rigors of climate with painful losses due to frostbite and avalanches.

"In addition to the forces on the Austrian front and in the colonies, Italy has provided troops for Albania, the Aegean and Macedonia which need constant reinforcement owing to the grave losses sustained in the stern struggle against the common enemy. Italy has given her operations a constant offensive character which has engaged the largest part of the enemy's best forces on our front to the benefit of the general situation of the Entente, and also rendered possible last year's repulse of the Trentino offensive with the undertaking simultaneously of a powerful offensive on the Isonzo front which led to the conquest of Gorizia and finally, aided by the wisdom of our leaders and the valor of our troops, succeeded in the last comprehensive action to break through the enemy's lines in a section of capital strategical importance, despite the enemy's more favorable positions, striking a blow the importance of which is proved by its effect upon the coalition of the Central Empires."

Austria Using Up Her Reserves.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 8, —Austria's General Staff is employing all its reserves of fresh troops in the effort to arrest the tide of the Italian advance. It has also brought up many new guns, both in the Carso and Gorizia sections, and in the latter region appears to be using the full force of its artillery.

The Italians are answering with renewed vigor and frustrating all the enemy's attempts, adding to their artillery activity during reconnoitring raids, accompanied by bombing expeditions which do great execution. At the same time, as Italy maintains her superiority in aircraft, great squadrons of fast-flying battleplanes sweep far behind the enemy's lines, raining destruction and death on railroad centres, munition stores, and moving troops.

Austria Claims 18,500 Prisoners.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—An Austrian official statement, under date of Friday, Sept. 7, received here reads:

The enemy is vainly endeavoring to dispute our successes gained in the last few days on the Carso Plateau.

Extraordinarily violent fighting continues on Monte San Gabriele, the enemy regarding no sacrifices too great. Ten attacks on the northern slope yesterday were defeated. A heavy thrust also was repulsed on the western slope.

Since Aug. 19 we have captured altogether on the Isonzo 500 Italian officers and 18,000 rank and file.

DRAFTS WORKERS UP TO 50.

Germany Calling Older Men to Compulsory Civilian Service.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 9.—All men in Germany up to the age of 50 are to be called for duty under the Civilian Auxiliary Service act.

Many business concerns will be obliged to close because of the drafting of their employes under the provisions of this law.

FRENCH HOLD FAST ON VERDUN FRONT

GERMAN LOSSES VERY HEAVY

One Thousand Dead Counted in One Spot—British Gain Near St. Quentin.

PARIS, Sept. 9. — Strong German forces this morning attacked the French positions on the right bank of the Meuse, north of Verdun, over an extent of nearly two miles and succeeded in gaining a foothold temporarily in one section of the line, according to the statement issued by the War Office tonight. French counterattacks eventually regained all the positions. The Germans also made an attempt against the newly won French positions north of the Chaume Wood, but without success.

The Germans' losses were very heavy, nearly 1,000 of their dead were counted in front of the French positions in the Bois des Fosses after the fighting of yesterday.

The night report reads:

This morning, after intense artillery preparation, a German attack in force was made against our positions on the right bank of the Meuse along a front of about three kilometers on both sides of Hill 344. Under our violent fire the enemy attack was broken and was not able to reach our lines on the greater part of the front. Enemy detachments which had succeeded in gaining a foothold east and west of Hill 344 were driven back by the vigorous counterattack of our troops, who completely re-established their lines, taking about fifty prisoners.

In the course of the afternoon the Germans renewed their attempt against our new positions north of Bois le Chaume four times. Our fire drove them back to the trenches which they had left. Prisoners remained in our hands.

Counted Nearly 1,000 German Dead.

Last night's fighting in the various sectors of the French front is thus described in the afternoon report:

During the night our detachments executed various surprise attacks into the German lines, notably near La Royère Farm, east of Rheims, and in the region of Maisons de Champagne. We captured some material and a certain number of prisoners.

On the right bank of the Meuse the Germans launched violent counterattacks upon the positions we conquered yesterday in the sector of the Bois des Fosses and the Bois de Caures. The enemy attacks were broken by our fire, which inflicted heavy losses upon the assailants. At some points on the front of the attack fierce fighting took place. Our troops resisted energetically, after alternating advances and retirements maintained their positions.

The number of prisoners which we took on Sept. 8 numbered about 800. Our reconnoitring parties which pushed out in front of the Bois des Fosses count nearly 1,000 enemy dead before our lines in this region.

On the left bank of the Meuse there was great artillery activity on both sides, without infantry attacks.

Failed to Gain Objective, Berlin Says.

BERLIN, Sept. 9, (via London.)—French troops which atacked the German lines in the Verdun region, while in general driven back to their original positions, retained possession of some ground in the southern part of Chaume Wood and on the ridge to the east, Army Headquarters announced today. It is asserted that the objective of the French was the Village of Ornes, and this they failed to gain, suffering extremely heavy losses, while 300 prisoners were taken by the Germans.

The statement follows:

Army Group of the German Crown prince—In Champagne, French battalions that pressed forward east of the Somme-py-Scuain Road were driven back by a counterattack.

Before Verdun fighting took place throughout the day on the east bank of the Meuse. The first waves of the French attacking forces in the morning, between the Bois des Fosses and Besonvaux, broke down under the fire of our trench garrison. In a fresh assault, favored by fog, the rear echelons of our enemy succeeded in gaining ground in Chaume Wood and Ornes. This village, according to the statement of a captured officer, was the objective of the French attack. Here they encountered a powerful counterattack by our reserves and were thrown back southward. In the evening a fresh thrust by our battle troops completed the success.

As the result of the hard fighting the enemy in general was driven back to his positions of departure, but retained a small part of the ground gained in the southern portion of Chaume Wood and on the ridge extending to the east of the wood. Of the three French divisions which suffered the most sanguinary losses, these, according to the statements of prisoners, reaching 30 per cent., more than 800 prisoners remained in our hands. Our infantry fought excellently, and the effect of the artillery fire was very good, while valuable services were performed by our aviators.

BRITISH WIN 600-YARD FRONT AT HARGICOURT

Strike Again Adjoining Scene of Aug. 26 Successes and Make Progress.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—British troops this morning carried by storm 600 yards of German trenches southeast of Hargicourt, (about eight miles northwest of St. Quentin,) taking fifty-two prisoners. Raiding operations by the Germans took place southeast of Ypres last night. The Germans took three and lost twelve prisoners. A slight improvement of the British position northeast of St. Quentin is reported.

The night official communication follows:

In successful local operations this morning southeast of Hargicourt the Northumberland troops attacked and captured 600 yards of German trenches, south of the positions we gained in this area on Aug. 26. We also captured fifty-two prisoners and two trench mortars.

At the same time we attacked a small portion of a hostile trench required to round off our line east of Malakoff Farm, and captured it after heavy fighting, in which considerable casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

During the night hostile raiding parties attacked two of our posts south of Holleheke, [southeast of Ypres.] After sharp fighting, with heavy enemy casualties, the raiders succeeded in entering one post, from which three of our men are missing. The attack on the second post was driven off, with enemy loss.

Early in the morning the enemy also attacked our trenches in the Inverness Copse, but was repulsed, leaving twelve prisoners in our hands.

The earlier stages of the fighting northwest of St. Quentin are described in the afternoon report, which says:

Early this morning troops holding our line east of Villeret, southeast of Hargicourt, attacked and succeeded in entering German trenches on a front of several hundred yards. A number of prisoners were taken by us.

We successfully raided the enemy's trenches during the night in the neighborhood of Gavrelle and east of Vermelles and secured a few prisoners.

Hostile artillery was active during the night in the neighborhood of Westhoek. We captured thirteen prisoners as the result of local fighting northeast of Ypres.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The text of today's Belgian report follows:

On Sept. 8 and 9 the German artillery was active against our works and our communications, especially at night. By means of poisonous shells fired at long range they bombarded our encampments. Our artillery replied with a harassing and neutralizing fire.

BERLIN, Sept. 9, (via London.)—Army Headquarters reports the repulse last night of strong British attacks, preceded by drumfire, northeast of St. Julien. The text of the statement reads:

Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders increased firing activity prevailed on the coast, from Houthulst Wood to the Menin-Ypres Road. After drumfire violent attacks were made last night by the British northeast of St. Julien. The enemy was everywhere repulsed.

South of La Bassée Canal and on both banks of the Scarpa the British, after strong artillery preparation, made powerful reconnoissances, which brought them no success. North of St. Quentin encounters developed this morning near Gricourt and Villeret.

FORECAST NEW PEACE TERMS FROM BERLIN

lition of the hated division into Austrian and German spheres of administration.

The Deutsche Bank already has announced its intention to establish a branch in Riga as soon as conditions permit. This indicates that Arthur von Gwinner, Managing Director of the bank, believes Riga hereafter will remain within the German sphere of influence.

The Conservative and Pan German newspapers daily are playing more boldly with the thought of a dissolution of the Reichstag and new elections, which they assert would, after a proper campaign of education, show that a majority of electors were not in favor of a peace based on renunciation of the spoils of victory.

Representative Socialist and Centrist organs, on the other hand, show a certain distaste for this suggestion, and profess not to have the slightest fear that the sentiment of the majority of the people can be changed against them. But they evidently anticipate that if the entire machinery of the Government is mobilised against them, and elections are held under the patriotic slogan, "The Fatherland Is in Danger," while their own campaign is hampered by the censorship, the result might weaken their hold on the Reichstag.

The Catholic organ Germania and the Cologne Volkszeitung both oppose a dissolution of the Reichstag. It is difficult to say how far the annexationist press is in earnest in its demand for a dissolution of the Reichstag, or whether the campaign carried on by it is intended merely to encourage Chancellor Michaelis to disregard the Reichstag peace resolution. There is little doubt, however, that the Conservatives would rather risk elections than lose the privilege of their caste in Prussia without a fight.

More Denunciation of Wilson.

The press is full of denunciations of President Wilson's reference to the necessity of a reform of the German Government. This, characterized as an unjustified interference in Germany's home concerns and an attempt to dictate to the German nation how it shall run its own affairs, figures in an increasing number of resolutions by local organizations and in editorials in the Chauvinist press.

It may be that President Wilson's words and subsequent State Department explanations are having their effect on the voiceless masses, as the moderate and non-Socialist press shows little inclination to take issue against the real or assumed resentment of the other newspapers and the influences which are behind the new anti-Wilson demonstrations in Hanover, Potsdam, Breslau and elsewhere. On the other hand, President Wilson's appeal appears to have secured a decided success in Austro-Hungary.

Chancellor Michaelis has followed Emperor William in his public reference to the discussion. He has telegraphed to the Rhenish Peasants' Union, which had forwarded him a resolution of protest against President Wilson's words and a peace of renunciation, his thanks for "the manly declaration of loyalty to the monarchy which is certain to find throughout the entire German nation an echo which will destroy all the hopes of our enemies of weakening our inner unity."

AUSTRIANS INSIST BERLIN BLOCKS PEACE

Vienna Newspapers Assailed by Hamburg Paper's Correspondent for Their Utterances.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9.—The Nachrichten of Hamburg, in discussing the question of peace, says that both Austrian and German Pan Germans declare that Austria would be false to herself and to Germany if she advocated a speedy peace based on a renunciation of annexations and indemnities by Germany.

The Nachrichten's Vienna correspondent assails the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, the Zeit, and the Sonntag-und-Montag-Zeitung, all of which have printed articles intimating that Germany is the great obstacle to the conclusion of peace and calling upon Chancellor Michaelis to put forth a plain, unconditional statement, accepting the basis of no annexations or indemnities, and to take real steps to introduce a democratic Government in Germany.

Professor Lammasch, a noted jurist, in the Neue Freie Presse declares that the German Chancellor, by his conditional "as I interpret it," withered the Reichstag's peace resolution before it could come to fruit.

The Sonntag-und-Montag-Zeitung says that it is idle to deny that the peace question is indissolubly bound up with the democratisation of Germany. This, it adds, after a promosing beginning, has now ceased to make progress, and nothing is being done to weaken the accusations regarding German evasion and German deceit as to peace conditions.

The Zeitung asks why Dr. Michaelis does not declare, without "ifs and ands," that Belgium will remain a free and independent State.

The Zeit says there is no prospect of peace because the German administration is unwilling either to adopt a democratic system or make known its peace terms.

The Nachrichten is highly indignant at "this treasonable alliance of Austrian friends of peace with Lloyd George and President Wilson," and suggests that Austrians, instead of worrying about the internal affairs of Germany, might better turn their attention to their own house, "where the democratisation which they are preaching is still only on paper."

LIBERALS DEFEND WILSON NOTE

Pan German Campaign Meets Opposition in Germany.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 9.—The Frankfurter Zeitung issues a warning against the efforts of German reactionary elements seeking to make political capital out of President Wilson's reply to the Pope. It says that certain parties make the point that "national honor" now requires that the democratization of Germany shall be indefinitely shelved because America makes it a condition of peace.

The Zeitung says that, while unwarranted interferers will be sharply rapped on the knuckles, the people must not be deterred, even by enemies, from enforcing reforms deemed necessary for the benefit of the country.

The chief Centre Party organ, Germania, commenting editorially in a similar vein, says that, while not even the slightest reform must be introduced under foreign pressure now must be denied just because it is likely to be construed as a concession to outsiders.

The Württemberg Centre Party organ, the Deutsches Volksblatt, says that President Wilson's reply has created a new situation, and promises the majority party in the Reichstag from the peace resolution pledge, and that its attitude must be revised accordingly.

ASSAILS LANSING 'INSOLENCE.'

Rhine Paper Says It Has Destroyed "Pretty Plots" Against Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 9.—Secretary Lansing's statement regarding the attitude of the American Government to the question of the continuance of the Hohenzollern dynasty provokes a furious tirade from the Rheinische Westfälische Zeitung, which says:

"The arrogance and insolence of the American Government as exhibited in Lansing's statement is colossal. It is incapable of further increase. But it is good that the Americans should bluster thus, for they destroy thereby their own pretty plots. Now even the greatest visionary in Germany, even Socialists completely enmeshed in doctrinaire ideas, even Vorwärts itself, must realize what is at stake. Deception is no longer possible. And one thing more—German self-respect is aroused by these words of Lansing, which act like strokes of a whip. The red flame of fury must rise in the cheeks of every honest German when he reads such productions of American bumptiousness."

The same writer remarks:

"Let submarine warfare go on a little longer and the enemy will learn the character of the German Government at the peace conference table and will then have to accept it as it is."

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 9.—The Rheinische Westfälische Zeitung of Essen announces the formation of a new "patriotic party," the leaders of which are Duke Johann Albrecht of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Admiral von Tirpitz, and Dr. von Wolfgang Kapp. The party's initial proclamation declares hostility to the Reichstag's peace resolution and to "any peace dictated by weak nerves."

The proclamation adds that the party is "non-political" and will be dissolved on the day peace is concluded, it aim being "to combat inner dissension in view of victory."

The Cologne Zeitung says:

"President Wilson's impertinence is beginning to get on our nerves. Has he no adviser to tell him that this sort of interference is bound to goad a proud people to fury?"

SAXON VOICE FOR BARGAINING.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 10.—"The evacuation by Germany of the occupied districts as a preliminary condition of peace negotiations is an unfulfillable desire of the Entente," said the Saxon Premier, Count Vitzthum, to a representative of a Budapest paper yesterday.

Count Vitzthum's importance as a representative of the interests of Saxony in the Federal Council makes his statement virtually official in character. He continued: "The present battles are the last desperate attempt of the Entente to improve the military situation somehow, for they can hardly longer hope for timely help from America.

"The submarines are doing good work and the Entente will not be able to avoid an economic collapse, whereas our own economic situation, after the good harvest, is sound. Under these circumstances the enemy will sooner or later have to open negotiations for an agreement. But by agreement we can only understand mutual concessions, not on one side surrender.

"We cannot at present announce our minimum demands because that would leave no room later for further bargaining. The extent to which the belligerents can arrive at a rapprochement depends on the military situation.

"I gather that the Chancellor has arrived at an agreement with our allies regarding the reply to the Pope, and that this reply will be couched in terms sympathetic toward his Holiness. President Wilson appears to have shouldered the responsibility for the Entente's wrecking of the Pope's humane step, but the Entente will have to bear the consequences."

Würtemberg Catholics issue in their chief organ, the Deutsche Volksblatt, a statement questioning the advisability of further peace resolutions by the Reichstag majority. The paper says that the declaration is inspired by a well-known Würtemberg Catholic, who states that, although he supported the Reichstag resolution, "Wilson's note has robbed me of all belief in the practicability of peace efforts. For the present Wilson has put out my peace star."

SUSPECT OUR RED CROSS.

Irkutsk Workmen Watch to See Ex-Czar Isn't Spirited Away.

PEROGRAD, Sept. 9.—Irkutsk newspapers received here say that the local Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates have appointed two agents for duty at the railroad station to inspect American Red Cross trains, bound east.

They believe that the former Emperor Nicholas, in the company of a "mythical American mission," is being smuggled out of Siberia.

Hit in Ambulance Service.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Bayard Bowin of Philadelphia, a driver in the American Field Service, is now in the American hospital at Neuilly, suffering from a wound inflicted by a shell fragment. His condition is not serious, but it will take some weeks for his wound to heal.

messages from Buenos Aires to Berlin by way of Stockholm. The Observer states that it received this information from "trustworthy sources." The newspaper continues:

"It must cause some ground for reflection to the German Government that one of the first acts of their new enemy, whose activities and value in the prosecution of the war they have affected to despise, has been to expose a procedure which affords damning evidence against themselves and against a neutral Government which it is charitable to regard as their dupe.

"The contents of the published telegrams cannot but show neutral Governments the amount of faith they may put in German promises and German concessions. The accredited representative of the German Empire at Buenos Aires, while actually enjoying the hospitality of the Argentine Republic, is seen advocating the deliberate murder of Argentine subjects on the high seas in order that the sinking of Argentine ships by German submarines should leave no trace which would make their crime known in Argentina and so make an enemy of that country.

Policy Known to Neutrals.

"This is no single instance. 'Spurlos versenkt' is a consistent policy which is deliberately carried into effect in an attempt to hide from neutral countries the results of unrestricted submarine warfare, and other nations than Argentina, such as Norway in particular, know it to their cost.

"A further point of interest is the assurance apparently given by the Argentine Government that Argentine ships will in future only clear as far as Las Palmas. In other words, the pretended immunity for Argentine ships, accorded with a show of magnanimity by the German Government, is a pure farce. In reality the immunity is secured not by Germany refraining from sinking Argentine ships in the war zone, but by the Argentine Government undertaking to arrange that no Argentine vessel should be found in that zone.

"It will be interesting to hear what Argentine public opinion will say when it now learns the real nature of the 'diplomatic victory' which the Argentine Government claims to have gained."

The Daily Mail, in an editorial, congratulates the American Intelligence Service on "the second great exploit of this year," and says:

"A blacker piece of diplomatic devilry on Germany's part never was exposed, while on Sweden's part an offense against neutrality and against every decency of international intercourse, deep, deliberate and despicable—how despicable can only be realized when we recall that Sweden has herself suffered from such outrages as she is assisting Germany to inflict upon Argentina.

"Such conduct combines maximum cowardice with maximum treachery, and we are confident that every honest Swede will promptly resent it as a cruel stain upon national honor and demand a strict account from the Government that juggled the country into a position so basely callous and dishonorable.

"As matters stand, the Allies have every excuse for treating Sweden as a country that has gone over to the enemy. We are confident, however, that no allied government wishes to visit upon the Swedish people the extreme punishment of war for the criminal acts of their rulers. But the Allies, and especially the United States, have a sharp weapon in their hands in the form of blockade."

The Daily Chronicle, commenting editorially on "The Perfidy Displayed," says:

"Though only three of these messages have been dragged to light, it is perfectly clear from their contents that they form part of an extensive and habitual correspondence which is specially concerned with apprising the German authorities on ship sailings in order that their submarines might sink them. The peculiar enormity of the wrong committed by these high Swedish officials seaks for itself, but we must hesitate to believe that it had any indorsement from the Swedish Government. It reflects rather the mentality of the section of Swedish aristocracy and official class which gets its training and ideas in Germany and is the most Germanophile class outside the fatherland."

Swedish Election Pending.

Declaring that the Allies expect the Swedish Government without delay to disown and punish the guilty officials, The Chronicle adds:

"The Swedish people are now in the throes of a general election and have it in their own hands to decide by what sort of a Cabinet they wish to be governed and what policy they desire to pursue."

Remarking that there are several matters doubtful in Swedish policy that require clearing up, The Chronicle says:

"Regarding the disclosure of the German Minister who made the hellish proposal, Count Luxburg is otherwise obscure. But what the world has come to perceive is that there is scarcely a German in authority, from Willy on his throne communicating with Nicky, down to the chargé d'affaires in a South American capital, who won't be detected thinking and acting in this vein if his secrets are brought to light."

Denounce Germany's Action.

All the London newspapers in their editorials similarly denounce in unmeasured language Germany's action as revealed in the Swedish disclosures. The Daily News, under the heading of "The Latest Perfidy," says:

"It is impossible to discuss what effect the astonishing revelations will have on the general course of the war. If further evidence were needed of the cynical brutality with which Germany fights, it is surely here. Among the ruffians to whom the German public service appears to afford refuge in such numbers, Count Luxburg, German Chargé d'Affaires in Argentina, is entitled to a very prominent place."

The Daily News thinks it is scarcely credible that Argentine public opinion, even if the Argentine Government were willing, will tolerate a continuance of friendly relations with Germany.

"It is still possible to hope," The Daily News continues, "that Count Luxburg's actual use of the concession granted him—in plain English, the prosecution of murder on the high seas—was unknown to the officials concerned, but it can scarcely have been unsuspected, and, at best, the concession itself is an abuse of confidence which clearly cannot be tolerated.

"On the other hand, there are grave reasons why, pending Swedish explanations, the matter should be handled cautiously. The pending Swedish elections may result in a decisive defeat of the German propaganda, and it would be folly to destroy the effect of the labors on behalf of the Entente of Hjalmar Branting (Socialist leader in the second chamber of the Swedish Parliament) and the party he represents."

Russian Revolution and Sweden.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 10. — Comments of the English press on Secretary Lansing's revelations follow the line expected by all those conversant with the facts of Sweden's attitude toward the war situation. Several papers emphasize the fact that habitual breaches of neutrality of which the Foreign Office in Stockholm is held guilty are violations of express assurances given to Great Britain by Sweden more than two years ago.

That such assurances should have been accepted can only be ascribed to one of two reasons—either that it was not politic to suspect them or that there was not adequate proof to convert suspicion into certainty. The Russian revolution completely altered the situation from the point of view of policy. Three-fourths of Sweden pro-German inclinations arose out of distrust of Russia, whose fortification of the Aland Islands had given rise to more than one diplomatic incident. With the overthrow of Czardom and its devious methods, the situation of the Allies in regard to Sweden was cleared of several difficulties.

The apparent stupidity of the British Government in permitting the transmission of cipher messages which it had reason to suspect were inimical becomes comprehensible when British control of cables is remembered only by consideration of the fact that interference with Swedish communications might have thrown that country into the arms of Germany at a time when the Government of Sweden was weighing in the balances the advantages of neutrality.

DISCLOSURES MAY HIT SWEDISH MINISTRY

London Discusses Likelihood of Effect Upon the Present Elections.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 9. — Well-informed South Americans in London expect considerable results from the disclosures of German machination in Argentina. Taking South America generally, Argentina was the chief German stronghold. There are other parts of the continent where German influence is strong, but nowhere did it reach such a paramount position as in Argentina. The effect of the exposure from Washington is expected to extend over the whole continent in such a way that the attitude of South America as a whole in regard to the war may undergo an important modification. Immediate developments are not looked for.

Political conditions in Argentina, where a radical President is exercising a semi-dictatorship in opposition to the majority of Congress, make it difficult to determine the probable course of events. It is, however, considered likely that the German Chargé d'Affaires will receive his passoports, and that Sweden will be informed that her Minister's continued residence there is undesirable.

On this side of the Atlantic the chief interest lies in the question: "What will be the attitude of the Allies toward the Swedish Government?" Capable diplomats hold that, while there is every reason to suspect the Swedish Foreign Office of complicity, there has not yet been abduced sufficient evidence to prove it. British representations on the subject in the past elicited protestations of innocence and promises of good behavior, and it remains open to the Swedish Foreign Office to make disavowals in the face of the present disclosure.

In some quarters the incident is regarded as another instance of the many in which the secret diplmacies of Europe have taken undue advantage of the powers which long-established custom have given them. A section of opinion in Sweden never troubled to conceal its sympathy with Germany—a sympathy due more to antipathy to Russia on account of her treatment of Finland than to love for Germany, though the very militarism of Germany has admirers among the military caste in Sweden.

But, taking the Swedes in the mass, they have been strongly in favor of a policy of honest nuertality.

The Activists, who favored Swedish participation in the war on the German side, were never more than a small minority, and that minority has for some time been a dwindling one. In the general election now in progress in Sweden the Activists have lost ground.

The convincing proof of the complicity of the Foreign Office in the German machinations is brought forward, as it seems not improbable that it will be, popular feeling in Sweden is bound to be seriously disturbed by the revelations that Swedish diplomatic representatives have been acting in collusion with German Ministers in order to assist in the nefarious activities of the U-boats.

Although, according to various reports, full publicity has not been given in Sweden to the State Department's revelations, it is believed that enough has been published to make it likely that popular feeling will find expression in today's and tomorrow's polling, with an increased vote in favor of Branting, who is decidedly pro-Ally.

Whatever further action is taken by the United States will be in concert with our allies. The offense committed by the Swedish Legation is as much directed against their welfare as it is against that of this Government. In some quarters the suggestion is advanced that the matter does not immediately concern the allied Governments unless it should appear that the Swedish Government is directly implicated in the amazing violation of international law. The Allies, of course, will expect Argentina to act quickly and with spirit. As for Sweden, there must be something more than any lame explanation. If the defense offered should prove unsatisfactory it will be then for the Allies to determine their course. Even should Sweden come out boldly with a statement that her sympathies were all with Germany and accompany that bold declaration with an announcement that she intends to enter the war on the German side, she cannot clear away the stain on her character as a nation that will come from her own acknowledgment.

In view of this the Swedish Government is expected to put forward some excuse accompanied by a disavowal of the unneutral acts of the legation. Nobody here believes that she will make any admissions that in any way will tend to confirm the suspicion that the Government of Sweden was officially cognizant of the offense committed.

The important thing that stands out in this international sensation, however, is the effect the implied accusation against the good faith of Sweden will have on that Government's future attitude in the war. To purge herself of the charge, her reparation for the acts of some of her officials must be sweeping and complete. Dismissals must be made in a way to convince the allied world that there is no string tied to them. Her disavowal must leave nothing left unsaid. She must furnish some explanation of why the Swedish representative at Buenos Aires was not admonished for his first telegram sent in behalf of the German Chargé, or, if he was admonished, how could he have dared to send additional messages two months later.

Swedish Hatred of Russia.

Beyond these explanations, Sweden may be brought to a consideration of what may be forced upon her by the feeling she has aroused among the allied nations. Her main hatred in the war is directed toward Russia. At this time, when Russian resistance is apparently at the lowest, Sweden, it is suggested, may think that her opportunity has come to strike her old enemy. A more general belief is prevalent here, however, that she will prefer not to enter the war and will advance an explanation which the allied nations may feel that they are obliged to accept.

What that explanation will be, in part at least, is indicated by the statement given to The Associated Press in New York tonight by Baron Akerhielm, Swedish Counselor of Legation and Chargé d'Affaires in Washington. He said he told Secretary Lansing that the telegrams forwarded from Buenos Aires for the German Chargé were in German code, which, he said, "was sufficient proof that the Swedish Minister-resident did not know their contents." Baron Akerhielm's explanation apparently means that as the Swedish Minister could not read the messages in the German diplomatic cipher, no offense was committed by the Minister in sending them.

It is pointed out here that this explanation makes the Swedish Minister's offense worse, if anything. It is construed to mean that he was willing to send to Germany through the medium of the Stockholm Foreign Office any message that was handed to him for transmission by the German Chargé. The German Chargé might have put into his messages information as to the sailing of a military expedition from the United States or told the name of a steamer on which Mr. Balfour sailed from America for England and the port at which it was due.

The statement made by Baron Akerhielm tonight contained the first information that the Buenos Aires dispatches were in the code of the German Government. All the State Department is willing to say in this connection is that the translation of the German dispatches given to the press was "from the German text." Baron Akerhielm's disclosure suggests that the State Department is in possession of the German code book. If such an explanation as Baron Akerhielm offers should be accepted, it would still leave the Swedish Government to explain whether it forwarded to Berlin messages from a German diplomatic officer of which it did not know the contents.

The State Department has not accused Baron Lowen, the Swedish Minister-resident to Argentina of having personal knowledge of the sending of the telegrams furnished by the German Chargé. It alleges that the German dispatches were dispatched by "the Swedish Legation." But the statement made to The Associated Press tonight by Baron Akerhielm refers to the German dispatches having been "forwarded by the Swedish Minister-resident at Buenos Aires."

GOMPERS'S DISTRUST OF SWEDEN CONFIRMED

Lansing Statement Proves Wisdom of Labor in Ignoring the Stockholm Peace Conference.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, said last night that the exposé by Secretary Lansing of the aid the Swedish authorities had been giving Germany proved that both he and Secretary Lansing had been justified in preventing the representation of American workers at the Stockholm peace conference. He said that what he knew to be the attitude of Sweden toward the warring powers had had considerable to do with his action.

MRS. KING THE PREY OF SWINDLER BAND

MEANS HIRED AS PROTECTOR

Mrs. Melvin, Sister of Mrs. King, Declares the Former Detective Is Innocent—He Swears Vengeance.

Revelations that have come to light since the death of Mrs. Maude A. King, who was mysteriously shot near Concord, N. C., on Aug. 29, show that for years the woman was the victim of adventurers, who followed her from place to place and either robbed her or helped her to squander a great part of her fortune.

Gaston B. Means, who was with Mrs. King when she was shot, first met her in 1914, when the William J. Burns National Detective Agency assigned him, at the request of her mother and sister, to protect her from the band of adventurers and adventuresses, mainly of English nationality, who had followed her to this country from Monte Carlo.

The family appealed to the Burns agency after the United States District Attorney's office had declined to interest itself in charges that the conspirators, who had Mrs. King in their power, had violated the Mann White Slave act in taking her to San Francisco.

Means succeeded in saving her from the Monte Carlo group of fortune hunters. Another thing which aided in breaking their grip on the woman was the fact that lawyers active for her family succeeded in having her declared incompetent after medical examinations had established that her mind in 1914 had been badly shaken. They then tied up her fortune so that her European followers could obtain nothing further. All of her current income and ready money, totaling more than $50,000, was taken from her by this band, according to the report made in behalf of her family to the Department of Justice in 1914.

After Means had got her out of the clutches of this band of parasites, he resigned from the Burns Agency and took charge of her affairs himself. The investigation of charges that the European fortune hunters had transported her from State to State in violation of the White Slave act was made by Edwin M. Stanton, Assistant United States District Attorney, in 1914. He said last night:

"The Craft Detective Agency and a lawyer placed the charges before us. We were interested in the case because the interpretation of the Mann act in the Diggs-Caminetti case had not then been made, and the question of the effect of the law was an interesting one.

"There was a great deal of doubt about the facts, however. The woman alleged to be the victim was well along toward middle age, and it appeared to be stretching the Mann act to attempt to apply it to such a case, where the real reason for taking action was not to suppress vice, but to deliver the woman from undesirable companions.

"Finally we found that it was not contended that a violation of the Mann act had been committed, but the Craft Agency, acting for the family, charged that the law would be violated in San Francisco. We advised the agency that, in the event of a violation of the act, the trial would have to take place in San Francisco, and that the complaint should be made to the United States District Attorney there."

Asked for Prosecution.

The Craft Agency and lawyers engaged by the family then sent the following telegram to the United States District Attorney in San Francisco:

Mary Robinson, widow, over 70, directs me to request your office to arrest and hold, violation Mann act, M. J. Marsh, alias Milburne, with valet. Has transported her daughter, Maude A. King, married woman, mentally deficient, New York to San Francisco; immoral purposes.

Mrs. King, wealthy woman. Member New York State Lunacy Commission ready to go and testify mentally incompetent. Marsh and valet members English conspiracy preying upon wealthy American women.

Mother fears girl will be taken out of country. Were one when apprehended. Will send representative to coast. Your office hold girl as material witness. About to start proceedings to appoint a conservator.

Arrow's Detective Agency, London, and Scotland Yard, can give full information of Marsh and his associates. Marsh, 35 to 40 years; 5 feet 2½ inches; smooth face, light brown hair, fair complexion; 175 pounds; shoulders slightly drooped. Mrs. King, 34 years old, fairly stout, dark hair and eyes; florid complexion, indicating dissipation; 140 pounds. Will probably be stopping some hotel, man and wife, under name beginning with M, which is characteristic with Marsh and seemingly code signal with accomplices.

After failing to obtain action by appeals to United States District Attorneys, the representatives of the family sent a long statement regarding the case to the Department of Justice at Washington. The history of the woman's relations with the Monte Carlo band were detailed as follows:

"In November of 1913, while en route for Europe with her sister, Mrs. Melvin, she was introduced to John Marsh, who was a passenger on the steamer these ladies traveled on, and with Marsh was a companion, Jackson. When the boat neared shore Marsh disappeared, but he turned up at Monte Carlo, and brought with him an automobile which was the property of Leonard Davis, London bookmaker and gambler. And, shortly after, Davis and a woman known as Elsie Davidson, who posed as a sister to Marsh, appeared at Monte Carlo, and the party was later joined by a man named Kemp.

"About this time Mrs. Melvin learned that Marsh had met and married a widow, who survived her marriage to Marsh but a short time. At the time of her death she was possessed of considerable means, and Marsh inherited and acquired about $1,200,000 from her estate.

Her Mind Weakened.

"About this time Mrs. Melvin was informed that these parties were dangerous men, and she appreciated that her sister was in a weak mental condition. She immediately took steps to leave the place, fearing the influence of Marsh and his companions on Mrs. King because she had already observed that Marsh and Davis were plying her with liquor and paying marked and constant attention to her and made great efforts to have Elsie Davidson be in the company of Mrs. King continually.

"At this time, also, Mrs. Melvin objected to the conversations of the Davidson woman, who was continually reciting the fact that, although she was married to a man who was living in the Middle West of the United States, she had lived at various times as a mistress of other men, and had always profited by it and had a good time, and that she was going to marry some millionaire who was then in London. And all this group were impressing upon Mrs. King's mind that this conduct was not wrong or reprehensible, and that, if they were caught at it, there was always a good chance of taking the husband into camp and fixing him up by the payment of money.

"Mrs. Melvin was apprehensive and went to London with her sister and went to Arrow's Detective Agency, which in a very short time reported that Davis was a leader of a band of conspirators who preyed upon American women of wealth; that he was a gambler and bookmaker; that Kemp was a thief, who had been arrested for a jewelry robbery at Monte Carlo about the time these ladies left, and that Marsh put up $20,000 cash bail for Kemp.

"Marsh is a man who used to prey upon women. Jackson, who is a shrewd, clever fellow, poses as Marsh's valet."

"After this group came to this country, they sought and found Mrs. King, but Mrs. Melvin threatened to complain to the immigration authorities and the band scattered and went into hiding.

"Mrs. Melvin employed a detective agency to ascertain something about these people and the reports of that agency were taken from Mrs. Melvin's apartment in the Hotel Majestic. They are now in the possession of a woman hairdresser, acting in connection with a doctor, in assisting Marsh and his co-conspirators, and she is deriving profit from her conduct in this respect.

Another Woman Conspirator.

"I have since learned that she had expressed a desire for some one to save her from this 'gang of crooks that have surrounded me,' to use her own language. Within six weeks, while stopping at the Hotel Belleclaire, New York, Miss Dolan, who had been waiting on her, broke into the room in which she was practically confined by this same band of crooks and found her in a most deplorable state of intoxication, and, to use Miss Dolan's language, 'My God, doctor, she is absolutely insane and paretic, such a beastly state this gang has got her into. No one would recognize her.'"

An attorney employed by the family, in a statement which was made to the Department of Justice, said that he had watched Marsh working on the woman when she was living at the Hotel Manhattan. He said:

"They sat drinking champagne from 10 to 12:30 o'clock. I was alone, seated at the table next to him, and heard him say in substance:

"'You know your relatives are scheming against you, and that I am the only friend you have in the world; and I will quit you if you don't get away where they cannot be always nagging at you.'

"Tears were running down her cheeks and she sat at the table half stupefied with liquor and in the attitude of a child who is being scolded."

The estate was placed in the care of the Woodruff Trust Company of Joliet, Ill. George Woodruff of Chicago was President of this company. These precautions to tie up the property and the vigilance of Means in his capacity of bodyguard stopped short the intrigues of Marsh and his companions.

BROTHERS STILL IN CHICAGO.

Wait for North Carolina Authorities to Solve Death Mystery.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Chief interest in the case of Mrs. Maude A. King shifted today to North Carolina, where her friends will try to get some light on the manner of her death. Her brothers, Paul Robinson of Muskogee and William Robinson of Morrison, Ill., are still in Chicago and will remain here subject to the call of P. C. McDuffie of Atlanta, Ga., who represents them and Mrs. King's aged mother, Mrs. Anna L. Robinson, who is in feeble health and closely guarded in a hotel in Asheville.

Friends of Mrs. King were discussing today a startling story that she was being hounded by a band of swindlers These men are said to have begun preying upon Mrs. King when she was in Europe in 1913 with her sister, Mrs. M. C. Melvin. From Monte Carlo they followed her to London and throughout the United States.

Americus Melville, attorney, who on Saturday announced the discovery of the will of Mrs. King, said tonight that he was awaiting information from New York before filing the document with the Probate Court. If it is decided that New York was her legal place of residence, the will is to be filed there.

Inquiry into the activities of Gaston B. Means today revealed that he instituted suit against the Pullman Company in August, 1912, for $75,000 damages, alleging that he fell from the upper berth of a car while riding from Detroit to Chicago on Dec. 3, 1911. He alleged the chain broke and the berth sagged, letting him fall into the aisle. He won on a compromise. He also collected money on accident policies.

MRS. MELVIN DEFENDS MEANS.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. C., Sept. 9.—Hayden Clement, prosecuting attorney for this judicial district, who arrived in Concord last evening to investigate the mysterious shooting of Mrs. Maude A. King, millionaire widow of New York City, on the night of Aug. 29, returned this morning to his home without giving out a statement as to what would be done in the case.

Mr. Clement said, however, that he had been to the Blackwelder Spring, the secluded spot where the tragedy occurred, and that he had been unable to reconcile the statements that were made at the Coroner's inquest. The spring, surrounded by dark woods and undergrowth, was a poor place, according to the Solicitor, for target shooting so late in the evening. Another thing that he could not understand, he said, was the statement made by Gaston Means that when he had put the automatic pistol in the forks of a tree and was at the spring, thirty feet away, he turned and saw Mrs. King with the pistol in her hand.

"The automatic pistol was only a small one and could be placed in the vest pocket," said the Solicitor. "Gaston Means says that it was so dark that he had to strike a match to see if there were any bugs in the Spring. If it was so dark, I do not understand how he could see that Mrs. King had the little pistol in her hand at such a distance."

Mr. Clement also is puzzled to know how Mrs. King's ankle was broken.

No further legal steps have been taken, and the members of the automobile party are still here, with the exception of Captain W. S. Bingham, who has been spending several days in the neighboring county on a fishing trip. Captain Bingham formerly commanded the local military company and is about 50 years of age. He is locally famous as a wing shot and as a trainer of bird-dogs, which is his occupation. He is not a relative of the Means family, and his association with them is that of an old friend.

Mrs. Maizie Melvin, sister of Mrs. King, who is visiting at the home of the parents of Gaston and Afton Means, was interviewed today in the presence of Gaston and Afton Means, their father, W. G. Means; Misses Kate and Belle Means, sisters of Gaston, and Mrs. Gaston Means.

One of Mrs. Melvin's first statements was one exonerating Gaston B. Means of blame in the death of her sister.

"Before God, that boy is innocent!" she exclaimed. "It is all so terrible. There should be some way to stop the things that are being said about my dead sister."

She then began to weep.

"There is going to be a day of reckoning," interposed Gaston Means, "for those who are responsible for such insinuations. As a Southern gentleman I brand them as dastardly, and I mean to defend to the limit the name of the woman who is dead and unable to protect herself."

Gaston Means then reiterated much that he had said at other times regarding the tragedy. Mrs. Melvin talked very little, and what she said was in the presence of the members of the Means family.

Charles S. Dry, who lives near the Blackwelder Spring, visited the scene of the tragedy today with THE TIMES correspondent and pointed out the spot where Mrs. King is said to have fallen when she was shot. He was on his porch at home, several hundred yards from the spring, when he heard the shot. He did not know there was any one at the spring until the shot rang out. Then he heard voices mumbling. He said today that judging from the sound of the voices there were more than three persons doing the talking. It was stated by all parties at the Coroner's inquest that Gaston and Afton Means and Captain Bingham were the only persons who got out of the automobile with Mrs. King near the spring, and that the negro chauffeur had been sent back some distance to wait with the automobile.

The mumbling was accompanied by the sound of persons moving through the undergrowth, and Dry says that they were apparently on the side of the spring furthest from his house. According to evidence at the inquest, Afton Means and Captain Bingham had got out of the automobile before they reached the spring, and would therefore have been on the side nearest Dry's home. Dry is confident that some one ran through the brush after the shot was fired.

"The mumbling kept up for about ten minutes," said Dry. "We saw a car coming from town, going much faster than they usually do. When the car got to the road it turned toward the church and didn't stop until it got to the spring and ran up under the trees. When the car got there it stopped, stood there about five or ten minutes, and then turned round. It was about three or four minutes after the car turned around before I heard the door shut, and then it started off."

According to this statement, twenty minutes elapsed between the time Mrs. King was shot and the time the men started toward Concord.

When Gaston Means was asked about the automobile coming down the highway from Concord and driving up to the spring, he said that it could not have been his car, and that Mr. Dry had evidently seen another car. Mr. Dry said today:

"The car that drove away from the spring after the shot was the same car that I saw coming down the road and drive up to the spring."

He said that he could see from his house that there was not another car at the spring.

Berlin Reports French Success on Macedonian Front.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—The War Office today made public the following:

Macedonian Front—South of Lake Ochrida Russian attacks were repulsed. West of Malik, French forces occupied some villages on the northern bank, in the Devolle sector.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Concerning operations on the Macedonian front Army Headquarters today issued the subjoined bulletin:

Eastern Theatre—Rifle firing and intermittent cannonading have been in progress along nearly the whole front. There was quite spirited artillery fighting north of Monastir in the region between Lake Malik and Lake Ochrida. A surprise attack enabled us to occupy the heights to the west, and northwest of Platsa.

SWISS MAY OUST SLACKERS.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 8.—Several Swiss newspapers demand that the authorities take the same measures as were adopted recently at Budapest, Hungary, and expel all foreigners of military age.

Such action by the Swiss Government would affect many rich men who are here with their families at the best hotels and houses, and who legally have no reason for not returning to their native countries.

If Switzerland adopted the suggested measures, it is estimated many thousands, including many Americans, would be expelled.

PETROGRAD BEGINS CIVIL EVACUATION

Ministers are unanimous in favor of decisive measures against any violent demonstration.

At a late hour it was reported that the Maximalists, in view of the energetic countermeasures taken, had decided to abandon their program.

Sapping the Council's Power.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—What is regarded as an important change in the administration of affairs at Petrograd has just been made under orders issued by Premier Kerensky, according to information reaching the Russian Embassy in official dispatches from the Provisional Government.

These changes in administration matters, which are considered as having added importance on account of the German threat of an advance on Petrograd, provide for a Special High Administration for Petrograd and its metropolitan district. Premier Kerensky's order creating this administration subordinates all military elements in Petrograd and its metropolitan district to General Korniloff, Commander in Chief, and subordinates all civil affairs in the capital to the Special High Administration or commission.

It is expected that this change will result in the divorcement of the civil administration in the capital from the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates and also end the interference of the council with military affairs in Petrograd.

If Germany shows that it really is the purpose of the German armies to advance on Petrograd, it is expected that General Korniloff will declare martial law in the capital. From all that can be gathered here it appears that the Provisional Government is driving the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council from its position of self-constituted authority, but that the Government is not yet sufficiently strong to defy openly the power of the workingmen's organization.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 6, (Delayed.)—A cold, wet day, with a strong wind and a fortress gun booming at intervals to warn the inhabitants of the low-lying parts of the town of the rise of the Neva. Dull, apathetic, and depressed crowds are waiting in the rain at the central railway ticket office, and the Moscow station is thronged with people eager to get off as soon as possible to the south, to the east, to the Volga, to Siberia—anywhere out of reach of the perpetual alarms of Petrograd.

"Let them go," say the onlookers. "The more the better. The fewer mouths there will be to feed in the hard Winter that is coming."

The Government has been talking for some time about unloading Petrograd of its surplus population, not for military but for food supply reasons, and now it has appointed a special commission which is drafting concrete measures. Access to Petrograd is to be prohibited to all except Government employes, and especially favored individuals, and every encouragement is to be given to residents in Petrograd to leave the city. It is estimated that as a result of the committee's proposals the population of the capital will be reduced by over half a million. If this should prove feasible the food problem would certainly be greatly simplified, and in many ways Petrograd would be an easier city to manage.

In Moscow there is certain unrest in connection with food scarcity, though in only one instance has there been open disorder. Streets are patrolled, street meetings have been forbidden, and antisemitic agitation is spreading. There are symptoms of similar agitation in Petrograd.

PRAISES RUSSIAN ARTILLERY.

Korniloff Puts Riga Failure on Demoralized Infantry.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 9.—General Korniloff, Comander in Chief of the Russian Army, has issued an order in which he extols the brilliant work of the Russian artillery in the recent fighting, despite the army's lowered morale. He declares the artillery everywhere performed its duties thoroughly and is not to be blamed for the failure to turn its achievements to good account.

Soldiers' committeemen at the front, wiring the Central Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Deputies, charge the Petrograd press with exaggerating the cowardice of the twelfth army, and allege that the Riga catastrophe has been overdrawn for the furtherance of a counter-revolutionary campaign. Committeeman Koutzina, attached to the twelfth army, telegraphed:

"Officers confirm the courage of our soldiers and falsehoods about the demoralization of the army are refuted by the fact that our troops made several counterattacks."

In explaining the deserters thronging the roads eastward, he said it was natural in a retreat for some soldiers to become separated from their regiments.

The correspondent of the Novoe Vremya, answering these allegations, relates a conversation with General Klembovski, commander on the western front, to the effect that two infantry and two cavalry regiments and all the artillery brilliantly performed their duty, while one division and two brigades of infantry inquestionably failed. A large percentage of the infantry threw away their rifles and fled. He cited an instance of deserters looting the military stores, adding that measures had been taken to arrest these traitors. Six hundred deserters arriving at Pskov by train were arrested and returned to the front.

As further evidence of the demoralization of the Russians, the correspondent asserts that three regiments of Germans crossed the Dvina at midday on pontoons without the loss of a man. He declares the infantry deserted the artillery and was deaf to the pleas of the latter to assist in removing ammunition.

Military patrols are covering the roads and arresting deserters. Battles between German cavalry and Russian rear guards continue in the vicinity of Segevold, Pskov and Chaussee. General Klembovski is of the opinion that the lull in the German pursuit is temporary and that it is likely to be resumed, but believes that even if they succeed in reaching Pskov before Winter it will constitute no great menace, as that is the utmost the enemy can hope to attain.

MARSHAL BREAKS UP ANTI-DRAFT MEETING

Orders Speaker from East Side Platform — Crowd Is Near Panic.

THEN HUNTS FOR SHIRKERS

Federal Official Compels Men to Produce Their Registration Cards —Many Without the Cards.

Federal Marshal McCarthy, assisted by the police, last night broke up a meeting of 1,500 "conscientious objectors" to the draft who had gathered in Forward Hall, 175 East Broadway, on the lower east side. The meeting had been wrought to a high state of excitement when Marshal McCarthy decided it was time to interfere.

Emma Goldman was scheduled to speak at the gathering, which was held under the auspices of the League of Conscientious Objectors. Charles Sonnenschein, a coworker of Alexander Berkman, opened the meeting. He assailed a number of policemen in the hall, and finally, after he had asked for funds to aid the movement against the draft, began to criticise the United States Government. Here Marshal McCarthy stepped from a group of his men he had in the hall and said to Sonnenschein:

"Step down from that platform quick, and make no fuss about it."

"Show your authority," exclaimed the speaker. "By what authority do you dare order me to cease addressing my fellow-citizens?"

The Marshal, not a small man physically, stepped close to Sonnenschein and displayed his gold shield so that the speaker could read what it said. Immediately Sonnenschein changed his manner.

"My friends," he said to the audience, "the United States Marshal has ordered me to cease speaking and has requested me to leave the platform. Although I question his authority to act in this manner, I must obey and wait until an indictment or something or other is brought against me."

This announcement evoked groans and hisses from the crowd. Bernard Sernake, Chairman of the meeting, advised his fellow-objectors to go home. Some one else jumped to the platform and told the persons in the audience to do as they liked.

Disorder followed. Some started out and some started toward the platform and the Marshal. The disorder was increased almost to panic when the crowd found all the exits except one closed, and that one guarded by uniformed policemen. Most of those in the crowd seemed to think they were prisoners. Marshal McCarthy, who was shouting from the platform, finally made himself heard.

"Women may pass out," he said. "But every man in this hall will have to show his registration card, if he ought to have one, before he can get out."

Then followed another rush for the door. The crowd was forced back and men began a hasty search of their pockets for cards.

"I've got my Sunday clothes on; my card is in my other suit," was what most of the men told the policemen, but that excuse was not accepted.

Marshal McCarthy designated a room adjoining the hall as a detention pen, and soon it was overcrowded with men who were unable to show registration cards. When the room became overcrowded the Marshal took the detained men downstairs into a larger room. In a short time the larger room downstairs was filled. About 2,000 persons gathered outside the hall, and their manner became so threatening that Captain Robinson of the Madison Street Station sent a call for the reserves. The arrival of these was a signal for another outburst of disorder in the streets outside the hall in Rutgers Square. The police were obliged to charge the crowd repeatedly to clear a way to the entrance of the hall.

Meanwhile the men who were detained inside the building made the best of the situation by singing. One woman forced her way into the room and refused to leave until her husband went with her. Marshal McCarthy let him go.

The Marshal explained to the men why they were detained and told them to be orderly. Practically all said that they had registration cards at home. The Marshal then ordered his men to take the names and addresses, cautioning the men against deceit. Their cases will be investigated today by agents of the Department of Justice. After the release of the men the Marshal made this statement:

"I stopped the meeting because I considered that the speakers were induging in seditious utterances, and because the character of the meeting, no meeting of the character of the one held tonight will be permitted to proceed. The speakers attacked the Government, the motives of Congress, and the conscription act, and these utterances were cheered by those who attended the meeting. I am not in a position to say what further action may be taken by the Department of Justice in dealing with this matter."

The meeting was opened by Sernake. He said that the Government has no right to compel conscientious objectors to slaughter their fellow men. The second speaker, Jacob Abrams, expressed himself similarly, and Louis Fraine, editor of The New International, a Socialistic publication, denounced capital and accused Congress of enacting class legislation.

Sonnenschein, who is an organizer of the League of Conscientious Objectors, was making a plea for funds when the Marshal broke up the meeting. Despite the excitement $1.0 was collected. Sonnenschein said the league had a membership running into the "thousands, both in the United States and Canada." It was formed six weeks ago.

It was said after the meeting that any of the men rounded up tonight who could not produce registration cards today would be arrested forthwith.

MOB FIGHTS POLICE TO RESCUE SAILOR

A crowd of 500 persons attacked a policeman from the Adams Street Station in Brooklyn last night when he used his nightstick on a sailor from a United States ship. The sailor resisted arrest after he had failed to heed the command to cease singing in a crowd at Livingston Street and Elm Place, Brooklyn. The sailor was sent to the Cumberland Street Hospital, and four civilians were arrested on the charge of interfering with an officer.

Ten sailors were singing and acting in a disorderly way when Policeman H. E. Bilms ordered them to cease making noise on the street. Stephen Prendirnamo, who said he lived at 192 Butler Street, Brooklyn, when he was not on duty, continued to sing, and, it is charged, added taunts to the policeman. Bilms seized the sailor and started to the station with him. Prendirnamo is said to have attacked the policeman, who retaliated by using his nightstick. Civilians who were passing objected to the treatment of the sailor and attempted to interfere.

Policeman Carman had come to aid Bilms, and when the sailor sank to the ground unconscious the crowd began to pelt the two policemen with stones. Dragging the unconscious sailor with them, the policemen made their way to a sheltered doorway, and the crowd followed and continued to throw stones at them. After the fight had gone on for about fifteen minutes other policemen arrived and the crowd was dispersed, but Bilms held Launcio Nassino of 440 Union Street, Brooklyn, and Robert Dugan of 126 Butler Street, Brooklyn, on a charge of interfering with an officer. Two other men who came to the station to make a protest were held on the same charge. They were Thomas Bove of 174 Butler Street and Dominic Grandanelli of 584 Union Street.

Dr. Anna Weingraad, an ambulance surgeon, who attended the sailor, refused to tell what injuries the man had suffered, but Sergeant W. F. Sullivan of the Adams Street Station said the hospital report showed the sailor was "suffering from alcoholism."

BIG WHISKY CARGO HERE.

Arrives Three Hours Before Import Prohibition Begins.

After being three weeks on the voyage across from England through dodging mines and submarines and being buffeted by a cyclone off Newfoundland, an 8,000-ton steamship arrived last night with her holds filled with Scotch and Irish whiskies and gin. On account of the long passage the importers of the cargo were anxious, as they feared the freighter might have shared the same fate as the Assyria, which was torpedoed and sent to the bottom of the Atlantic with her holds loaded to the hatches with choice spirits from Scotland and Ireland.

The importation of foreign spirits is prohibited after midnight on Sept. 9, and the freighter just saved it by three hours. The cargo will be entered this morning, when the Custom House is opened at 9 A. M.

These four paragraphs refer to the Bonnet Rouge affair, by which the present crisis has been in part precipitated.

Neither the Malvy nor the Caillaux organs advance any real defense or explanation of the affair. M. Malvy tries to evade the issue by pleading his devotion to democratic principles and trying to imply that it was in the interest of the working masses that he received Almereyda. The Caillaux press goes further and raises the cry that the republic is in danger and endeavors to depict the whole affair as a reactionary plot against the republican form of government.

GERMANS ON RIGA FRONT PREPARING NEW BLOW

Aa River in Livonia Bridged and German Troops Massing on North Bank.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 9.—German engineers have bridged the Lower Aa River in Livonia and the enemy forces are being concentrated on the north bank of the stream under cover of the cavalry, the War Office announced today in its report on the Riga operations. Russian cavalry is impeding the progress of the Germans along the Pskov Road. Unusual activity at advanced railway stations of the enemy in the Jacobstadt and Dvinsk regions is mentioned by the statement, which reads:

Western Front—In the direction of Riga the enemy, having constructed bridges across the lower stream of the River Aa, is concentrating his forces on the northern bank under the cover of his cavalry, which is continuing reconnoissances of our positions.

On the Pskov Road, in the region of Zegvolt, fighting is taking place between enemy vanguards and our cavalry detachments, which are hindering the march of the Germans.

On the south bank of the Dvina fusillades are taking place between our advanced posts and advanced detachments of the enemy. Our aerial reconnoissances revealed considerable animation at advanced railway stations of the enemy in the Jacobstadt and Dvinsk regions.

On the remainder of the front nothing of material importance occurred.

Rumanian Front—In the region south of the Radautz Valley, in the evening of Sept. 8, the enemy opened a barrage fire and assumed the offensive against a sector of our position south of Arbori. He was repelled by our counterattacks. In other sectors of this front fusillades and operations by scouting parties have taken place. On Sept. 7 a squadron of enemy airplanes made a raid on the station at Ajud and dropped a number of bombs.

Caucasus Front—There have been fusillades.

Aviation—Our airplanes have dropped bombs on enemy depots in the village of Rodze, northwest of Postavy, and also have attacked the village of Ozarichi, on the Oginski Canal, where the quarters of a German regiment are established.

BERLIN, Sept. 9, (via London.)—Russian troops engaged in consolidating new positions they have taken up north of the Dvina have had their protecting forces driven back upon them at many points by German advance guards, Army Headquarters announced today. There has been a notable renewal of artillery activity on the Rumanian front, in the Oituz Valley. The text of the statement reads:

Eastern War Theatre, front of Prince Leopold—Between the Baltic and the Dvina our advanced troops drove back Russian protecting troops at many points to positions which the Russians were newly consolidating.

Front of Archduke Joseph—South of the Pruth there was lively destructive artillery firing and forefield skirmishing.

In the Oituz Valley there was a remarkable revival of artillery activity.

GERMANS SLOWING DOWN.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 6, (Delayed.)—The German advance, which resumed its greatest rapidity Tuesday, is now slowing down, whether through weariness of the attacking force or the gradual hardening up of the Russians in new positions in the Venden-Volmar hill country, it is as yet too early to say.

The Germans now hold a curiously elongated line, with the point directed toward Venden, and while they themselves are now able to level only frontal attacks on the Russian base, their advance is exposed to a flanking attack from the Russian positions on the Dvina, near Friedrichstadt.

Their situation would, in fact, be precarious if the Russian Army were in good fighting order.

At Dvinsk there is a heavy artillery fire, but it is reported that all measures have been taken to prevent a possible repetition of the Riga surprise.

FINNS ARE PREPARING ULTIMATUM TO RUSSIA

Plan Definite Separation—Press Muzzled by Government and Several Papers Suppressed.

HELSINGSFORS, Finland, Sept. 9.—The Vetcherni Vremya announces that the Finnish Senate has drafted a bill for the definite separation of Finland from Russia.

The terms of the bill, it adds, are more drastic than those of the bill that recently passed the Finnish Diet, and it will be presented to the Provisional Government, the newspaper declares, in the form of an ultimatum.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Russian Provisional Government has decided to apply stringent measures to the Finnish newspapers, according to a Helsingfors dispatch today to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Several newspapers have been suppressed and the military censor has decided that only the official telegrams on war operations shall be published.

EX-CZAR IS EXONERATED.

No Evidence That Nicholas Knew of Monarchist Plot.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 9.—Regarding the monarchist conspiracy, the Procurator of the Moscow High Court declares that the chief conspirator was Mme. Hitrovo, wife of the former Director of Posts, who was engaged in a plot to release the former Emperor Nicholas. The Procurator says there is no evidence that Nicholas knew of the plot.

Some of the Petrograd papers assert that Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, brother of Nicholas, and Grand Duke Paul were not implicated in the plot, but were arrested as a measure of precaution.

AUSTRALIAN STRIKE STARTED BY I. W. W.

MENACE MET BY PEOPLE

Organization Declared Illegal and Leaders Convicted of Crimes and Sentenced.

The revolutionary activities of the I. W. W., acting to the profit, if not expressly in the interest, of Germany, and apparently financed by German money, have not been confined to the United States. Since the war began this organization has been conducting a campaign of terrorism and obstruction to war measures in Australia, which has now come to a climax in a general strike which began on Aug. 7, and by which leaders of the I. W. W. hope to paralyze the Commonwealth.

These facts were related last night by H. C. Hoyle, formerly Minister of Railways in the Government of New South Wales, who has come to this country as Special Commissioner to investigate the equipment, management, and operation of the railroads of the United States and Canada. Mr. Hoyle, himself a labor union man, who worked up from the bottom of a railroad machine shop to a position as superintendent of a railroad and then Minister of Railways in a Labor Cabinet, said that the Government and the patriotic citizens of Australia realized the peril and were taking the most vigorous measures to suppress the I. W. W. movement.

The Parliament of the Commonwealth has passed a law making the organization illegal, and its meetings have been broken up right and left by the police. A number of leaders have been arrested and convicted of crimes running all the way from disorderly conduct to more serious offenses, and given sentences running from six months to fifteen years. A campaign expected to result in the imprisonment or deportation of all the leaders who become active in the future has been instituted by the Government of the federation, with the backing of the States.

Jim Larkin is said to be on his way to Australia to take charge of the strike, and the leaders of the workingmen have threatened to put an end to the mining of coal and thereby to cripple the Commonwealth, but the leaders of the Government forces are confident of their ability to stop the movement before it amounts to what its promoters openly declared it was going to be, a revolution. But this general strike is only the climax to a progressive series of crimes, which Mr. Hoyle said had been proved to lie at the doors of I. W. W. leaders.

"Our revolutionary labor movement," said Mr. Hoyle, "began seven or eight years ago with the entrance into the country of a group who called themselves International Socialists and taught the same doctrines that the I. W. W. are now preaching. These men were all German; their library was German books of the most violent and inflammatory character; even the furniture they brought in with them was German.

Then I. W. W. Appeared.

"It was their object to win a position from which, when the long-awaited day came and Germany was at war with Britain, they could stir up over night industrial disorders which would create disturbance and disruption everywhere in the empire. But about eight months before the war began these people suddenly left the country for some reason, and very shortly afterward their place was taken by the present I. W. W. organization, whose members were all of British origin, but who had the same gospel which was preached by the International Socialists.

"Well, at first we thought that these men were only extreme but harmless cranks, that their wild theories were mere theories which would never bring any harm to the country. Our discovery of their true nature came, singularly enough, through one of their subordinate activities—counterfeiting. An enormous number of counterfeit five-pound notes suddenly made their appearance in circulation. These were traced to I. W. W. leaders, and by a chain o evidence the Government detectives became convinced that the notes had been printed at the printing office from which the organization issued its paper, Direct Action.

"There was a great deal of evidence against them, but the plates from which the notes were printed had disappeared. The police became convinced that the plates had been thrown into Cook's River, near Sydney, and after divers had gone down and searched the river bed for a considerable distance the plates were found. The work was traced unmistakably to the offices of the I. W. W., and a number of the leaders were arrested.

"Meanwhile the police had been following up another activity of the organization—a systematic campaign of arson which had done much damage and endangered many lives. There had been a series of large incendiary fires in the large cities of Australia.

"One of the detectives engaged in the investigation of this series of fires became a member of the I. W. W., was admitted into their innermost councils, and eventually at a drawing of lots of their most desperate leaders drew the red marble which designated him as the man to set fire to a large dry goods store in Sydney. His testimony and that already gathered led to several more arrests."

Leaders Found Guilty.

"Altogether a dozen men were arrested, all well-known I. W. W. leaders. These men were tried for counterfeiting and arson, all were found guilty, and they were sentenced, some to ten and some to fifteen years. They appealed every case to the highest court and had the best legal aid available, but in ten of the cases the original sentence was confirmed and in the other two ten-year terms were merely reduced to five years.

"Confessions obtained at about this time proved that one of the twelve, with some confederates, was responsible for the murder of a wealthy Greek named Pappageorgie, who had been waylaid and beaten to death shortly before, and the principal criminal, who had had a clean record before he joined the I. W. W., called down a bitter curse on the organization, which he held responsible for leading him on to arson and murder.

"All of this, however, did not break the spirit of the other leaders. A strike which began for no reason on Aug. 2 and was at first of minor proportions was speedily extended by 'sympathetic' walkouts, which naturally cover wide ground in a country so thoroughly unionized as Australia. The industrial unions of the unskilled laborers proved a particularly good field for I. W. W. propaganda, and the trouble spread. Previously Australian industrial law and custom have made it possible for a small minority of a union, taking a snap vote, to call a strike, which has been responsible for about nine-tenths of all the strikes in our history. A law has been passed by New South Wales which allows a union to elect either a strike or arbitration as a weapon for settling its disputes; but it can no longer have both.

"Whenever a strike is in prospect, the Government enforces an interval of twenty-one days during which a vote of the entire membership of the union is to be taken by secret ballot, and only the results of such a ballot can be used to call a strike. We think that the operation of this law will make it impossible in New South Wales for a minority of the discontented to drive unwilling workers into a strike which, once begun, they feel it their duty to prosecute with vigor.

"Meanwhile the I. W. W. itself had been outlawed, and, as I learn from private messages received since my arrival, vigorous action has been taken to break up their meetings and punish every overt act of their leaders. They threaten us with revolution, but we are determined to break it up, even if we have to use female labor to supply the places of some of the men who have gone out.

"As I said, we did not at first realize the magnitude of the danger. But the war and the I. W. W. have rapidly forced a cleavage between the loyal and the disloyal element in the Labor Party which has brought about an entire political alteration. The old Liberal Party has united with the more moderate Laborites, the labor men who are for the prosecution of the war, into the new national party, which has won the State elections in which it has so far participated by large majorities. The responsible and conservative labor union heads are standing by this party against the rump of extremists among whom the I. W. W. doctrines have made their converts.

"The I. W. W., of course, was one of the strong influences in the fight against conscription. Our Federal Constitution allows Parliament to decree conscription for naval service or home defense, but for overseas service an appeal to the people was necessary.

"When Premier Hughes returned from his last visit to England he promised that he would not ask for conscription again unless it were called for by the urgent danger of the empire. This call has happily not been given; but I am satisfied that, with the strength shown by the new national party, if Lloyd George should call on Australia now, conscription would be voted by a satisfactory majority."

Mr. Hoyle has been visiting several cities in Canada since landing at Victoria on Aug. 28, and will spend several weeks in the United States studying various phases of railroad organization. He will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at a luncheon given at the Railroad Club by the Railway Business Men's Association on Wednesday, and will also address other organizations of business and traffic men in various cities of the country.

25 YEARS IN MILK WORK.

Straus Stations Continue Heavy Distribution of Pasteurized Product.

With the distribution of 2,067,726 bottles and 1,296,021 glasses of pasteurized milk in the last twelve months, Nathan Straus has rounded out the twenty-fifth year of his work of saving babies' lives in this city. This makes a total of 44,940,907 bottles and 25,305,519 glasses of pasteurized milk dispensed in the quarter century during which Mr. Straus has maintained infant milk depots in this city.

The Summer stations in the parks, at which milk was supplied at 1 cent a glass, have been closed for the season, but the eight other Straus depots will be continued as usual throughout the Winter. These year-round stations are at the Straus laboratory, at 348 East Thirty-second Street, 54 Market Street, 402 West Thirty-seventh Street, 38 Macdougal Street, 322 East Fifty-ninth Street, 303 East 111th Street, and in Tompkins Square and Mount Morris Park.

The largest work of the Summer has been at the Straus depot in City Hall Park, where 404,741 glasses of pasteurized milk were supplied in the three months—an average of nearly 50,000 glasses a day.

Notwithstanding the multiplication of milk depots for infants, the city maintaining fifty-nine, the demand for the Straus pasteurized milk has not been reduced, the average output being 5,605 bottles a day. This has been due largely to the fact that the Straus depots are the only ones in the city that supply modified milk pasteurized in nursing bottles ready for feeding upon warming.

SAXE GIVES UP OFFICE.

Head of State Tax Board Will Practice Law Here.

Martin Saxe sent a letter to Governor Whitman yesterday resigning the office of State Tax Commissioner and the Presidency of the Tax Commission. The resignation is to take effect on Nov. 1. In his letter Commissioner Saxe told the Governor that the State Tax Department was now thoroughly organized and efficiently manned, and that its administrative construction was ready for additional jurisdiction "when the Legislature sees the wisdom of making further progress in tax administration."

Mr. Saxe announced that he had arranged the formation of a partnership for the general practice of law with Robert C. Morris and Guthrie B. Plante, with offices at 27 Pine Street. He also announced that Charles R. McSparren, formerly Deputy Attorney General and now counsel to the State Tax Commission, also would resign on Nov. 1 and become associated with the firm of Morris, Plante & Saxe.

POLICE KILL TWO IN I. W. W. RIOT

Anarchists Attempt to Break Up Loyalty Meeting in Milwaukee.

TWO DETECTIVES ARE SHOT

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 9.—Two Italian anarchists and I. W. W.'s are dead, one is fatally wounded, and two detectives are wounded following a clash at a loyalty meeting here this afternoon. The Rev. A. Gialiani, an Italian evangelist who had been making patriotic speeches to his countrymen here, was addressing a large crowd when the members of a Ferrera club near by rushed up, tore down the American flag, cursed the President and the United States, and attempted to tear the speaker from his platform.

The police, who had been advised that trouble might start, were there in plain clothes, and when the I. W. W. anarchists started trouble they went to the rescue of the speaker. The anarchists drew revolvers and fired at the police, who replied, shooting one man through the heart and wounding two others, one of whom died shortly after. Albert Templin, detective, received a wound in the hand and John G. Rydlewics, detective, a scalp wound.

A call was sent for reserves and many persons in the clubhouse were taken to jail. Among them was a woman, thought to be the leader. A great quantity of anarchistic literature was confiscated.

A heavy portable motor for use in boats was found and explains how the anarchists evaded the police on previous attempts to round them up. Many dry batteries, together with bottles of chemicals and bundles of wire, were also discovered in a secret closet.

The dead men have not been identified up to the present, as witnesses claim that they came from Chicago and the East only a few days ago. It was stated that they are personal friends of Autrio Giovanti, the I. W. W. leader of New York. The police refuse to confirm the report that the men left Chicago to avoid the recent raids on the I. W. W. headquarters there. Federal officers are reported to be making an investigation, as they feel certain that this club has harbored many aliens who have been active in stirring up seditious feeling in Milwaukee.

Other southern European nationalities besides Italians are represented in the arrests, and several Austrians and Hungarians are charged with being moving spirits in the club. They are under arrest and the police refuse to divulge their names.

TRAIN HITS AUTO; 6 DEAD.

Geisler Family Wiped Out in Accident at Crossing.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Six persons were killed today when an automobile was struck by a fast train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Haslit Crossing, one mile west of the village of Rush. The dead are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Geisler and their children, Edwin, 13; Theresa, 18; Mrs. George Heldt, 25, and Joseph Geisler, Jr., 16.

The accident occurred early in the evening at a crossing where there is a fairly clear view on both sides. The automobile apparently was struck while at the middle of the track, two of the bodies being found on the pilot of the engine when the train was brought to a standstill.

U-BOAT SINKINGS 4,561,000 TONS

as can possibly be built under a very intensive construction program.

It was in support of this belief that Secretary Daniels submitted to Congress estimates for an additional emergency appropriation of $350,000,000 to be used in building more destroyers. He has approved plans for doing everything within the ability of the Government to double the number of destroyers actually commissioned or under construction at the present time.

The figures regarding shipping tonnage sunk by German submarines thus far this year cabled by Mr. Grasty, showing that from Jan. 1 to Sept. 1 the total losses from U-boat operations aggregated 4,561,000 tons in a period of eight months, were accepted as supporting the conviction of naval experts here that the destroyer program should be pushed as rapidly as possible, so as to cut down this toll.

At this rate the total depradations from U-boats during the calendar year 1918 would be 6,841,500 tons. The average value of this shipping probably is not less than $200 a ton, which would mean that the value of the world's merchant shipping sunk by U-boats during the first eight months of the present year is somewhere around a billion dollars.

The figures submitted by Mr. Grasty for losses covering all belligerents and neutrals, coupled with the figures presented in Parliament on Aug. 16, by David Lloyd George, regarding British submarine losses, are accepted as marking the crest of the German U-boat warfare. With the passing of Summer, which favored U-boat operations with clearer skies and longer days, there would naturally be a diminution of tonnage loss, and as greater measures of protection and precaution are being taken by the merchant vessels, whether convoyed or not convoyed, as more merchant vessels are armed or using smoke screens, as more vessels are convoyed from month to month, while the destroyer is increasing its aggregate effectiveness, it is believed that the figures for the next three months will show lower tonnage losses.

Count on American Destroyers.

The destroyers now on the U-boat fighting line, with new vessels of this type being sent forward for service against submarines during the next six months, are counted upon to hold the submarines sufficiently in check to prevent their net inroads on the British tonnage, aggregating more than 200,000 tons a month. Every effort is being made to make these net inroads less than this figure, net inroads meaning the net losses of British shipping after making due allowance for new construction placed in commission to take the place of torpedoed vessels or those lost through mine contacts.

If this net loss can be held to this monthly average, not more than 1,200,000 tons would be the net loss during the next six months; but it is the belief of Mr. Lloyd George that the net loss will be less than this.

Mr. Grasty's figures for the last eight months show that the belligerent and neutral tonnage of the world lost 4,561,000 tons during that period, and that it is estimated that 1,000,000 tons of new construction have come into existence in that period, leaving 3,561,000 as the net tonnage loss in eight months.

Giving figures for British tonnage alone, Mr. Lloyd George, in his recent statement in Parliament, said that British losses in April were 500,000 tons, and that these came down to 320,000 tons in July. Replying to an interrogation from Mr. Billing at that time, Mr. Lloyd George stated that these figures were gross and included British submarine and mine losses, without deducting the ships which the British were building.

Mr. Grasty's figures for April show that 778,000 tons were lost, covering all neutrals and belligerents. Comparing this with Mr. Lloyd George's statement that 560,000 tons of British shipping were lost in April makes it appear that in April 218,000 tons of merchant shipping belonging to neutrals and belligerents other than England were lost. Mr. Grasty's figures for July show that 465,000 tons of shipping were lost by all belligerents and neutrals from submarines and mines.

Comparing this with Lloyd George's parliamentary statement, it would seem that in July 143,000 tons of merchant shipping belonging to neutrals and belligerents other than England, were lost. In other words, the Germans sank 240,000 fewer tons of British shipping in July than in April and disposed of 75,000 tons less of shipping of other flags in the latter than in the former month.

Lloyd George's Estimates.

The Germans have been claiming that the net losses they have imposed on British merchant shipping through U-boat ravages have been 450,000 to 500,000 tons a month. Lloyd George—dealing only with losses to British shipping—showed in Parliament that British net losses were under 250,000 tons a month after allowing for new construction, and asserted that the net loss of British shipping alone in August would probably be 175,000 tons.

In the same speech Mr. Lloyd George stated that in 1915 England built 688,000 tons of new merchant shipping and in 1916 it was 588,000 tons, while in the first six months of 1917 British yards had turned out 484,000 tons of merchant shipping, and during the second six months of 1917—July to December inclusive—the new shipping acquired by England alone would aggregate 1,420,000 tons, nearly 1,100,000 tons of which would be built in England and slightly more than 330,000 tons of which would be acquired abroad by England, so that for the whole year the tonnage acquired by England would be 1,900,000 tons.

"If the United States," said Mr. Lloyd George, in his House of Commons speech, "will put forth her whole capacity—and I have no doubt she is prepared to do it in her own thorough and enterprising way—I have no doubt at all that we shall have sufficient tonnage not only for this year—about that there is no doubt—but for 1918 and 1919 as well, because America can expand considerably her shipbuilding capacity if the real need arises for her to do so."

Both the Lloyd George explanation of the situation from the standpoint of British losses alone and the dispatch of Mr. Grasty dealing with the U-boat losses of all neutrals and belligerents, emphasizing the fact that America is being looked to as regarding the submarine menace as being still our great problem, are expected to carry great weight with officials here in their program for rallying to the demands of the situation.

This is reflected already in the Shipping Board and navy estimates pending in Congress, and which should be promptly passed, if the Administration's plans for meeting the transport situation are not to be curtailed.

To increase the number of the most effective U-boat weapons yet discovered the Navy Department has estimates pending of $350,000,000 for new destroyers. To offset shipping losses and provide sufficient overseas transports, the Shipping Board has pending $915,000,000 addition, to be immediately appropriated to carry forward plans for the building and purchase of new shipping before July 1 next.

The building program of the Shipping Board includes 1,919,200 tons already contracted for, 2,068,000 tons ready to be contracted for, and 1,281,400 tons under negotiations, as well as 1,800,000 tons of miscellaneous vessels and half a billion dollars' worth of vessels to be commandeered.

SAYS U-BOATS HAVE FAILED.

Lord Rhondda Thinks They Have Stimulated Production in England.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Baron Rhondda, the food controller, in an interview with the London correspondent of the Amsterdam Handelsblad, declares that the submarine campaign is no longer causing anxiety regarding England's bread supply.

"In one respect," remarked the food controller, "the submarine campaign is a blessing. It has acted as a stimulus to cultivation, so that within a year the United Kingdom will be practically independent of imports, so far as the chief foodstuffs are concerned."

Every citizen must protect his flag, and the flag must likewise protect each and every citizen-soldier and sailor on whom its protection depends

Long before this country declared war, and from the inception of the Humanitarian Cult, we advocated liberal insurance for our soldiers and sailors—our protectors—and their families—and proper protection for those who are wounded or maimed, as well as their dependents.

Our great President has recently recommended the granting of liberal insurance.

We now ask you to at once send a telegram to the Congressman of your district, urging upon him the necessity of immediately providing Government insurance of SUFFICIENT AMOUNT, so that the soldier or sailor and his family will never face want or be compelled to apply to charity societies for assistance.

Charity societies can give only according to the state of their treasuries, and that only after deducting running expenses.

No man, woman or child should be dependent upon the philanthropic humor of anyone—much less the soldier and sailor or his family—and it should be an honor and a pleasure for our flag, as a matter of justice, to provide for them.

Unless the disabled and maimed soldiers and sailors are properly taken care of, the Government will be forced later on, in order to cure the diseased and take care of the down-and-outer, to spend much more than the cost of insurance. It is, therefore, a splendid investment from a cold-blooded standpoint of dollars and cents, although we demand it for reasons purely Humanitarian.

CALL ON SOCIALISTS TO UPHOLD NATION

Participants in Loyalty Convention Exhort Party Associates to Show Ardor for War.

Minneapolis Gathering, Gompers Asserts, Will Check Sedition and Confuse and Confound Traitors.

An appeal to the rank and file of the Socialists to break away from the pacifist and anti-American campaign to which some of their party leaders are trying to pledge them was issued last night by a score or more of the leading Socialists of the country upon their return from Minneapolis, where they attended the Labor Loyalty Convention. Leading Socialists have long viewed with suspicion the activities of some of the official party chieftains, and it was this attitude of disapproval which led Charles Edward Russell, John Spargo, J. G. Phelps Stokes, and others to sever their connections with the American Socialist Party.

The appeal to the Socialists says that the cause of socialism is bound up with the success of the Allies and that the victory of Germany would be fatal to any hopes of the international Socialists. The appeal urges the Socialists to join the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, formed to put an end to the work of the forces of anti-Americanism among the workers of the United States.

Morris Hillquit, International Secretary of the American Socialist Party, and Victor L. Berger of Milwaukee, former Congressman, are prominent among Socialist leaders who have aided the pacifists of the People's Council. Mr. Hillquit was one of the leading figures at the Chicago peace-at-any-price meeting of the council.

The appeal, loyally penned by John Spargo, is directed to the Socialists of the United States. At the outset, the appeal refers to participation by Socialists in the Labor Loyalty Convention. It closes with a call to all Socialists to stand by the Government. The appeal follows:

"We have participated in the deliberations and conclusions of this [Minneapolis] conference not as narrow nationalists, but as Socialists and internationalists. We are convinced that the war in which the United States is now engaged is as just a war as was ever waged by a liberty-loving people against ruthless aggression and oppressive tyranny. We believe that the cause of socialism, of industrial democracy, of the progress of the world's workers toward a better and nobler life, is indissolubly bound up with the cause of the United States and its allied democracies.

"We believe that the cause of internationalism, the longing of mankind for a lasting peace and for justice and honor among the nations of the earth, depends upon the victory of the United States and its allied democracies over Germany and its allied autocracies.

"The United States did not seek this war. The war was thrust upon it. It was not we who made war. It was Germany that made war upon us. Our people had no other choice before them than shameful submission to an unparalleled series of aggressions upon the liberties of the world, or armed resistance to inhuman piracy waged on a colossal scale. They chose the course of right and honor.

"We, therefore, call upon all Socialists in the United States, both organized and unorganized, to perform their duties loyally as citizens of this Republic and to put all their energy and strength, all their ardor and enthusiasm at the disposal of our Government, so that the war may be carried to a rapid and victorious conclusion. They will thus be acting in accordance with the noblest traditions and highest aspirations of America, as well as of the international Socialist movement. They will thus be acting in the spirit of the immortal Karl Marx, who labored valiantly and unceasingly for the success of the Union arms in the civil war. They will thus be working hand in hand with the tried leaders and fearless champions of socialism in all of the world's democracies, with Jules Guesde and Edouard Vaillant in France, with H. M. Hyndman and Arthur Henderson in Great Britain, with George Plekhanoff and Peter Kropotkin in Russia, aye, and with Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg in Germany.

"German autocracy, with its feudalistic motives, German Junkerdom, German plutocracy—in short, German militarism constitutes the last citadel of the world's dark reactionary forces. Let us put at the disposal of our Government, led by our great democratic President, all our resources and all our strength for the conquest of this citadel, for the overthrow of these dark powers, and clear the path for the march of the peoples of the world toward peace and honor, freedom and democracy, international fraternity and socialistic cooperation.

"Socialists of America, join your local branches of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy."

Among the signers of the appeal are John Spargo, J. G. Phelps Stokes, A. M. Simons, Frank E. Wolf, Winfield R. Gaylord, Gertrude Breslau Fuller, Mila Tupper Maynard, Ralph L. Criswell, R. A. Maynard, and W. J. Ghent.

The delegates from New York to the Minneapolis convention returned to the city last night on their "Red, White, and Blue Special," which reached Grand Central Terminal a few minutes after 9 o'clock.

"It was a very successful conference," said Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor. "We have sent out a spirit from one end of the land to the other to stamp out sedition and to confuse and confound the traitors who talk peace and anti-Americanism and say they are talking for the American working man. That is a lie and we are going to make the whole country see that it is a lie. We are on the job; we are on our tip toes."

The Labor Loyalty forces will hold a mass meeting at Madison Square Garden next Saturday night, at which Secretary of Labor Wilson, Mr. Gompers, Charles Edward Russell, and James Duncan will speak. The two latter were members of the Root mission to Russia.

HARVARD MEN START SERVICE CLUB NO. 1

Will Be Home for Sailors and Soldiers While Off Duty in This City.

FIRST OF MANY PROJECTED

10,000 of Country's Defenders Will Be in New York Every Day, It Is Estimated.

Arrangements were completed by the Harvard Club last night to establish a club for the sole use of soldiers and sailors when off duty in New York. The club undertook to finance the equipment of commodious club quarters at Seventh Avenue and Thirty-third Street, near the Pennsylvania Terminal, and to maintain the club in the same style as any regular city club establishment. Jerome D. Green of Lee, Higginson & Co. will direct the finances and general affairs of the club, and Harvey P. Vaughn, who has had twenty years' club experience, will be in charge.

The club will be known as National Service Club No. 1, and the Harvard Club means to make it a pace setter for other like clubs which it is expected will be established here and throughout the country. The work in this city has been placed in general charge of the National Service Committee of New York City. Rowland Haynes, Secretary to the Committee on Recreation under the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, will endeavor to amalgamate the activities of all existing recreative agencies, such as the Y. M. C. A., the Y. M. H. A., and many other like organizations both for men and women, to provide clean amusement opportunity for soldiers and sailors in this city.

There will be, within a few weeks, about 120,000 soldiers and sailors encamped near New York. Of these, only about 25 per cent. have their homes here. It is estimated that about 10,000 soldiers and sailors will be in New York every day, off duty, and keen for something to do to help them forget camp routine. The work of organizing all that New York has to offer in the way of sport, recreation, and amusement has been intrusted to Leroy Peterson, Director of the Police Department Welfare Bureau. Mr. Peterson said:

"This National Service Club No. 1 is to be a real club. A member of the firm of McKim, Mead & White, the architects who built the Pennsylvania Station and who are now putting up the Pennsylvania Hotel across from the terminal, has directed the arrangement, decoration, and furnishing of the club. It will be for men only, and every man in uniform, officer or private, will be welcome. There will be a bar—and if the boys want it we'll put in a rail and hang a swinging door, but the drinks will be strictly soft. It will be a soldier's or a sailor's own club, where he can lounge, read, write, play pool, get a line on where to go to see what he wants to see, whether it's a baseball game or a prizefight, and possibly have some New York chap go with him."

Some of the New York City organizations which will assist in this new departure are the National Service Home Clubs, Girls' National Service Clubs, Supplementary National Service Clubs, National League for Women's Service, Women's Section of the Navy Club, Harvard Clubs, New York City Chapter of the Red Cross, Department of Education, New York City; Recreation Centres in Public Schools, Vacation Committee, Christ Church, Trinity Church, Warren Goddard House, Young Women's Christian Association, Young Men's Christian Association, and Young Men's Hebrew Association.

PERKINS ACCUSES BROWN OF DECEIT

Charges Senator Plays Into the Hands of Food Speculators and Gamblers.

DEFENDS OWN ADVERTISING

Financier, Still Out for Head of the Food Board, Champions Harvester Company.

In an open letter to Elon R. Brown, Senate leader, who opposed the confirmation of George W. Perkins as head of the State Food Board, Mr. Perkins yesterday accused Senator Brown of deliberately playing directly into the hands of food gamblers and "the hoarders and speculators who infest this State." He also accused the Senator of working secretly to defeat Governor Whitman's food legislation, and called upon him to come out and make his fight in the open.

Mr. Perkins told Senator Brown that ever since the opening of the Legislature last January he had resisted every suggestion of the Governor for remedying food conditions in the State, and that he had used every known method to postpone and delay any constructive legislation. Mr. Perkins defended his action in printing advertising in newspapers at his own expense and said that he was merely doing things in the light, while Senator Brown preferred doing them in the dark. His letter says in part:

"Your antagonism has not been in the open. It has been of the character so well exemplified by your course last Friday, when you deliberately held up the prompt execution of the law by failing to confirm both President Schurman and Mr. Wieting, against whom even you made no objection.

"You well knew that every day's delay at this time counted heavily against securing results for the people out of this year's food supplies. Your real fight was not against confirmation, but against giving Governor Whitman a chance to put the law in force. You have succeeded in forcing another delay by holding up all the Governor's appointees during a three-week recess of the Senate. Thus you have again deliberately played directly into the hands of the food gamblers, the hoarders, and the speculators who infest this State.

"Those who are as familiar as I am with the moves you have made ever since food control and distribution has been before the Legislature realize your controlling motive. You are opposed to the law and opposed to any man who will enforce the law. Having failed in your strenuous efforts to defeat the law, you now aim to defeat its purpose by delaying its operation.

"When I have felt that attention should be directed against iniquitous measures, such as the Constitutional revision of 1915, and such as your efforts during the last nine months to defeat constructive food legislation, I have gathered the facts and have published them frankly at my own expense in many newspapers in the State. Of all the money you have seen expended on public matters, do you know of any more openly or more properly spent? Is there any fairer way to reach the people than to present the facts publicly to them and ask their judgment?

"I concede that it is a method with which you are not familiar, but for that very reason it appeals all the more strongly to me. You prefer doing things in the dark; I prefer doing them in the light. You favor duplicity; I favor publicity.

"Your objection to such appeals as I have made to the people is not to the manner of doing it, but to the unanswerable facts I have presented. All that I have done has been to lay the facts before the people. The thing that affects you is that the people have read and believed—and have acted accordingly.

"Your second charge is that I organized the International Harvester Company and am still a Director of it. I was associated in organizing it. I am a Director of it. I am proud of both facts.

"By innuendo you say that the Harvester Company is such a disreputable concern that the Government is trying to dissolve it. Such an inference is false. The Government is seeking to dissolve the Harvester Company because it was composed of several companies, and on account of its size. The lower court, in passing upon the matter, specifically and emphatically declared that there was nothing to complain of in the Harvester Company's methods of doing business either with its competitors or with the farmers who buy many of its goods. In other words, the company was given by the court a perfectly clean bill of health as to its business practices.

"You intimate that because of my connection with the Harvester Company the very idea of the Governor selecting me as an administrator of a Food bill is preposterous, and you appeal to your associates on this account to reject me. And yet, of course, you are aware that ninety days ago President Wilson selected as one of the Commissioners from the United States to preach democracy to the Russian people Cyrus H. McCormick, the President of the International Harvester Company. Since then President Wilson has selected to take a prominent part on one of the new commissions in Washington my associate in the Directorate of the Harvester Company, Thomas L. Jones of Chicago. Only last week our National Government drafted Mr. Legge, the present General Manager of the Harvester Company, the man who deals directly with the question of manufacturing and sales for the International Harvester Company, and took him to Washington and put him on a national price-fixing board.

"Here are three prominent cases in which President Wilson has recently reached into the very centre of the International Harvester Company and taken men to represent the Federal Government, itself, on important missions and commissions. This would seem effectually to dispose of your flimsy pretense that you really believe that because I am a Director of the Harvester Company Governor Whitman should not name me as a member of the New York State Food Commission.

"Now, then, if you can make any real objections—objections that are genuine, that are honest, that are sincere—you owe it to the people of this State to at once produce them in writing, over your signature, and give them to the people of this State through the medium of the newspapers. You should do this so that the people may form an intelligent judgment on this extremely important matter.

"I call upon you to abandon innuendo and secret intrigues and come out in the open, man-fashion, with any worthwhile charge that can be made against me, and sustained by the facts."

It was said yesterday that Mr. Perkins had no intention of withdrawing from the fight and that he believed the Senate would still confirm his selection.

WHITMAN SUPPORTS FIGHT FOR RANSOM

CORRIGAN UPSETS PLANS

Rush Assails Leader Murphy in Asking Tammany Men to Back Him for the Bench.

Governor Whitman, in a communication to the Republican Fusion Committee, let it be known yesterday that he expects the Fusion managers to make a determined fight this Fall to wrest the control of the District Attorney's office from Tammany Hall. The Governor said he considered the District Attorneyship contest in New York County of an importance equal to the contest for a Fusion control of the Board of Estimate for the entire city. In his communication to Luther B. Little, campaign manager of the Fusion Committee, the Governor said he was satisfied that everything was being done to promote the campaign of William L. Ransom, the Fusion choice for District Attorney.

"The Governor wanted everybody to know," said Mr. Little, "how deeply interested he is in the vigorous and clean management of the great office of District Attorney. He considers that Judge Ransom is a man of exactly the calibre to recapture from Tammany hands the office of public prosecutor.

As a former District Attorney the Governor has personal knowledge, not only of the importance of the office, but of the kind of man necessary to be at its head. The Governor is unreservedly for Ransom.

"The Fusion managers look upon the smashing campaign, which Ransom is planning to make as an asset for the whole Fusion ticket. The sort of thing which has been happening in the Criminal Court Building in the best possible means of bringing home to the voters the consequence of the Tammany régime in City Hall. Judge Ransom's personal campaign has been delayed unavoidably, because the work necessary on the Interborough case and the West Side matter was entitled to his first attention. He has declined to let anything interfere with his official duties until important public service problems have been advanced to a point where an acceptable outcome is assured. That time is almost at hand and Judge Ransom will become a 100 per cent. campaign manager, committeeman, treasurer, &c. Judge Ransom says he expects not only to make a vigorous campaign, but is also completely confident of election."

The announcement of the candidacy of Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan has upset the Fusion campaign plans for the District Attorneyship race considerably.

A three-cornered fight, they believe, will hurt the Fusion ticket, and every effort will be made to get out a big vote for Judge Ransom. Other politicians believe, however, that Magistrate Corrigan, running on an independent Democratic ticket, will cut into the strength of Edward Swann, the Tammany candidate. Magistrate Corrigan will open headquarters in a few days in the Fitzgerald Building, Broadway and Forty-third Street, but his real campaign will not get under way until after the primaries. Mr. Corrigan's friends said yesterday that he would have the support of almost the entire police force as well as the firemen and school teachers. Dissatisfied city employes, who have had their salaries reduced, are also expected to line up behind Mr. Corrigan.

Thomas E. Rush, Surveyor of the Port, who is running for the designation of Supreme Court Justice in the Democratic primary against the Tammany selection, John V. McEvoy, announced yesterday that he would open headquarters in the Fitzgerald Building today and at once begin a vigorous campaign. Mr. Rush sent a letter yesterday to every Democratic committeeman in Manhattan and the Bronx asking organization Democrats to support him. He said that his continuous service of thirty years in the organization—three years as the Secretary of the General Committee, twelve years as an election district captain, and fifteen years as the leader of his own Assembly district—justified him in trying to get the Tammany nomination. In his letter Surveyor Rush made a bitter attack upon the methods of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, in selecting candidates. He said:

"Apparently, in the opinion of the present leader of the organization, a district leader is entitled only to serve and is precluded from holding any higher ambition or hope of reward. Our Republican opponents do not punish their leaders in this fashion. On the contrary, a Republican district leader has been nominated for Sheriff in this campaign, just as two years ago the Republican candidate nominated for that office against Sheriff Smith was a district leader. Four Republican district leaders have already been appointed to office by Governor Whitman. Four Republican district leaders have been appointed by State Controller Travis. Three Republican district leaders have been appointed by the present Mayor. Two Republican district leaders have been appointed to office by Controller Prendergast; County Clerk Schneider has appointed two Republican district leaders; Register Hopper appointed one Republican district leader, and within the last few years the Republican county organization has nominated one of its leaders for the Supreme Court bench and another leader for the City Court bench.

"There are Democratic district leaders just as clean and decent as those of the Republican organization, yet no Democratic district leader has secured favorable consideration for a nomination in four years, or for appointment to the head of a city department in over ten years."

There was much speculation among politicians yesterday as to the probable successor to Dudley Field Malone as Collector of the Port. The office is considered one of the choicest plums in the city, and Tammany is casting longing eyes at the place. It was said, however, that there was little or no chance of Tammany getting the appointment. Half a dozen independent Democrats are being mentioned for the place, among the names being Surveyor Rush, "Big Bill" Edwards, Collector of Internal Revenue, Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson, and John Z. Lowe, former Collector of Internal Revenue, who resigned recently to take up the practice of law. He is now the law partner of Samuel Seabury, who was the Democratic candidate for Governor last year. Collector Malone said yesterday that he had received no word regarding what action President Wilson was to take on his resignation, but that he would continue at work in the Custom House until his resignation had been acted upon.

Joseph T. Ryan, candidate for the regular Democratic nomination for Justice of the City Court, according to an announcement by his friends, will begin tonight a whirlwind campaign which will last eight days and take him into every part of Manhattan and the Bronx. Mr. Ryan in a statement last night said:

"This is the second race—and I think it will be the last—I have made for the City Court bench. I believe that I shall poll about twice as many votes this time as I did two years ago, when opposed by Justice Zeller. I got close to 20,000 votes in Manhattan and the Bronx without an organization. I have been repeatedly asked why I jumped into the race this year when regularity is the strict order of the day. My answer is, there is nothing irregular about my contest.

"That I am able to make the contest is due wholly to the Democratic leaders who fathered and signed the primary law. The Democratic organization was the strongest supporter of the primary law through its leaders at Albany. They certainly cannot complain, then, that I ought not to oppose the one-man ticket made in Fourteenth Street without considering the qualifications and popularity of other men who have been loyal Democrats but who never seem to be able to break into the inner shrine in Fourteenth Street, no matter how regular they are or want to be."

SCANDAL
By Cosmo Hamilton

Because she had wealth, beauty and position and the power they brought, Beatrix Vanderdyke scoffed at conventions and parental control. She ordered her comings and goings to suit her own will, until she ran her head into the noose of a hazardous situation.

Faced with a scandal, she boldly announced a secret marriage, and then asked the surprised man to "play up" to her statement. To teach her a lesson he did, and Mr. Hamilton's tale of the doing makes a story to satisfy the most exacting reader.

The European War

A Library of the Best Literature of the War

6,000 pages in 10 volumes; 480 pages of illustrations; 600 cartoons of all nations

Not a History of Facts, but the Facts of History

Compiled from The New York Times Current History Magazine

BETWEEN the covers of the ten volumes of THE EUROPEAN WAR Published By The New York Times is printed the record of the important events of the greatest and most sanguinary human struggle. As a chronicle of the material occurrences of the war and a compendium of its best literature, the work is invaluable. All sides are presented with the utmost fairness and impartiality. Written in the heat of the conflict, the recorded addresses and statements of the rulers and leaders of the belligerent nations reflect the real atmosphere of three epochal years.

THE EUROPEAN WAR Published By The New York Times is a storehouse of facts. Historians of the future will refer to it when they write out, from the perspective of later years, their narrative of the momentous strife.

An Unusual Accomplishment

Utilizing modern facilities of communication, which during the war have reached their greatest perfection, THE EUROPEAN WAR Published By The New York Times presents in enduring form the record of the great convulsion while its events are actually occurring.

The telegraph, the cable, the wireless, the airplane, rapid land and sea transportation, processes for the faithful reproduction of photographs on the printed page, the printing press—all have contributed to the prompt production of a splendid compendium of facts and information.

Proclamations of Emperors, Kings and Presidents are given in full. The reports of Generals commanding armies are official. The comment and criticism of policies and strategy are those of experts in international affairs. The record of available diplomatic communications between the nations is complete. The story is told of the change from the ordinary life of peoples in time of peace to the impressment of all human effort into the maintenance of war.

A Consecutive History of the War

Each volume of the work is introduced by a comprehensive account of the events of a three-months' period. Some of the best historical authorities in the United States have prepared the introductions, which together form a concise, consecutive history of the war to date.

An abundance of illustrations of battle scenes, photographs of great men, pictures of towns in ruins, reproduced in the perfected process of rotogravure, add vivid interest to the pages of each volume. There are 600 cartoons of all nations. Many accurate maps and charts supplement the text.

The late Joseph H. Choate.

The New York Times is rendering an inestimable service to all future historians and the world by the wonderful compilation which it is publishing under the title of Current History. I regard it as simply invaluable.

Review of Reviews, Melbourne, Australia.

No one who desires to get a real grip of the true situation in Europe should miss the monthly numbers of The New York Times Current History.

Antoinette Adamowski.

I consider Current History a most interesting publication of historic value.

Charles Seymour, Ph.D., Dept. of History, Yale University.

I am glad to state that of all the periodicals dealing with the European War, The New York Times Current History seems to me to be the most satisfactory. In no other publication has there been collected such a mass of diplomatic official documents, authoritative documents of international relations, or accurate chronicles of the progress of military events.

Robert S. Fletcher, Librarian of Amherst College.

We make a great deal of use of the magazine in our reference and debate work and find the material in it attractively presented and reliable.

Ellen Hayes, formerly Professor of Astronomy, Wellesley College.

Whenever I want something authoritative on any event of the great war, I turn to this magazine, and each new issue increases my gratitude to The New York Times for its publication.

Charles R. Skinner, New York State Librarian.

It is valuable not only for daily reference in these exciting times, but its value is sure to increase year by year, and become in time a priceless historic possession.

George Trumbull Ladd, D.D., New Haven, Conn.

I am glad to give my testimony to the value of The New York Times Current History as a means of keeping our people aware of the course of the great war.

Alice M. Baldwin, Bryn Mawr, Pa.

My friends and I appreciate, as I know all your readers must do, the efforts you are making to give us an insight into the causes and a fair and true picture of the events of this terrible war.

John A. Moroso.

Joseph S. Bridges, Chief Education Officer, Willesden, London.

It is the finest history of its kind I have yet seen on this terrible war.

James M. Beck, Former Assistant Attorney General of the United States

All accessible information without the slightest partiality or unfair discrimination.

E. G. Liardet, Sweet Briar College, Va.

I wish to thank you most sincerely for your splendid work during this European War; your fairness, impartiality and reliability are worthy of the principles brought forth and lived up to by your greatest men and would please Washington, Franklin, Lincoln and others.

A. C. Way, First National Bank, Los Angeles, Cal.

I desire to express my great appreciation. I do not know of its equal in the world as a review of all the important documents and historic happenings incident to the great war.

Albert Bushnell Hart, Professor of Government, Harvard University.

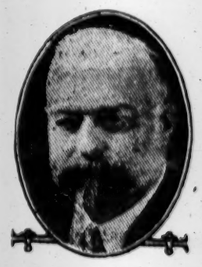
It is the most valuable single repository that has been issued.

E. Le Roy Bourne, Editor The Deseret News, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Let me express my sincere congratulations upon the manner in which The New York Times has presented the story of the war.

Thomas C. Erwin, Third National Bank, Atlanta, Ga.

As a busy man's magazine, it has no superior.



Franklin H. Giddings, Faculty of Political Science, Columbia University.

I have followed the successive issues of the magazine with keen interest and I regard it as an enterprise of first-rate importance. It is preserving for the future material which would otherwise certainly disappear from knowledge.

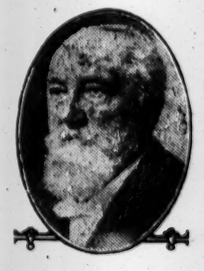
Fred. J. S. Gilbert, Biloxi, Miss.

This when complete will be the most remarkable history any man ever had.

C. T. Williams, Liberty Loan Committee, Baltimore, Md.

I consider that the bound volumes will be of inestimable value when the war is over.

Rudolph Blankenburg, Ex-Mayor of Philadelphia.



Its clear, unbiased, and comprehensive cycle of historic events as they chase each other in the world of war; authoritative statements on world affairs by leaders of public life and thought, and a fullness of general information, give it a value impossible to measure by mere words of comment. I conserve it as a compendium of historic merit invaluable for future reference.

RAILROADS MEETING ALL WAR DEMANDS

FOUR MONTHS OF POOLING

Every Freight Car Made to Do the Work of Two—Moving 1,000,000 Men to Camps Without a Hitch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The Railroads' War Board issued today a review of its achievements for the first four months of its existence, in which it showed that, as a result of the pooling effort, the efficiency of the railroads had been so increased that the transportation of 1,000,000 men to the training camps and cantonments by Oct. 20 would not interrupt or curtail the movement of freight. The report also told of the standardization of methods of settlement between the Government and the railroads, and of the designing and perfection of special troop train and hospital train service. The board said that there was no longer room for doubt that the railways would be able to handle their war job.

The review of the board's work, made public by its Chairman, Fairfax Harrison, said in part:

"The voluntary act of the 603 railroads of this country in merging their competitive activities for the period of the war and uniting in one continental system has not only made the transportation problem presented by the war less cumbersome to handle, but surer of satisfactory solution.

"In addition to welding into one loyal army each and every one of the 1,750,000 persons employed by the railroads—from engine wipers to Presidents—the coordination of the nation's carriers has made possible the most intensive use of every locomotive, every freight car, every mile of track, and every piece of railroad equipment in the country. It has also facilitated the securing of invaluable co-operation from the shippers and the general public.

Co-operation with Quartermasters.

"Skilled and experienced railroad men have been sent to every cantonment to assist the constructing Quartermaster there in the movement of all supplies necessary to the erection and maintenance of these military cities. A trained executive has also been stationed in the Washington Headquarters of the Supervising Constructing Quartermaster, so that every car needed in the transportation of Government supplies might be made available when needed. As a result of these co-operative activities, the movement of thousands of carloads of lumber and other supplies has been accomplished practically without a hitch.

"In addition, at the request of the Government, plans have been perfected whereby 1,000,000 men will be moved from nearly 5,000 different points to the thirty-two training camps for the National Army and National Guard by Oct. 20. About one-third of these men, the National Guard, are already under way and are carrying their tents and equipment with them. This means that, in addition to the coaches and tourist sleepers occupied by them, more than 12,000 freight cars must be transported.

"Right here it may be stated that freight of all kinds is now moving in unexampled volume. All of the traffic must be taken care of, and at the same time the 1,000,000 men upon whom the Government depends for the successful and speedy termination of the war must be brought to the places where they are to receive their training.

"Among some of the things accomplished by the board in the first four months of its existence have been the organizing of special equipment for hospital and troop train service, the standardization of settlements between the Government and the railroads, eliminating a large volume of correspondence and red tape, and the creation of a special committee on express transportation, composed of the Vice Presidents of the American, Wells Fargo, Adams, and Southern Express companies, to co-ordinate the work of the companies with the general problem of transportation.

Car Shortage Greatly Reduced.

"Car shortage has been reduced 70 per cent. On April 30, the so-called car shortage amounted to 148,627; on June 30, these figures had been cut to 77,144; on Aug. 1, the excess of unfilled car requisitions over idle cars amounted to only 33,776.

"In May, freight transportation service rendered by about 75 per cent. of Class 1 roads—earnings of $1,000,000 or more—was 16.1 per cent. in excess of the service rendered in 1916. In that year, which was one of unusual activity, the freight service rendered by the carriers was 24 per cent. in excess of that rendered in 1915. So the carriers have achieved the astounding feat of adding to their freight service in the short period of two years an amount equal to the freight traffic of Great Britain, France, Russia, Germany, and Austria combined.

"Approximately 20,000,000 miles of train service a year has been saved by the elimination of all passenger trains not essential to the most pressing needs of the country. This reduction of passenger service has released hundreds of locomotives and train crews and cleared thousands of miles of track that are absolutely needed in the freight service for the transportation of necessities.

"Freight congestion at many important points has been averted by promptly moving empty cars from one railroad to another, irrespective of ownership. By ordering the adoption of this policy, which is brand new to American railroad usage, the Railroads' War Board has moved 113,420 empty freight cars where they have been most needed.

"Through the pooling of lake coal and lake ore, a saving of 52,000 cars in moving these commodities alone has been achieved. A further saving of 133,000 cars has been made possible by the pooling of tidewater coal. Both of these pooling projects were brought about by the Railroads War Board, in collaboration with the Committee on Coal Production of the Council of National Defense.

Regulation of Grain Export.

"By regulating the movement of grain for export, the number of cars ordinarily required for this service has been reduced, despite an abnormal export increase this year, 75,682,028 bushels of wheat, corn, barley, and oats being shipped to the Allies from May 1 to July 14. This business was so handled that there were no delays and no blocking of facilities at either the grain elevators or the seaports.

"Although the figures on the intensive loading of freight cars are not complete, a sufficient number of reports have been received from the twenty-seven local committees of the War Board to show that commercial bodies and individual shippers in all parts of the country are giving hearty co-operation to the railroads' campaign to make one car do the work of two.

"Checks made recently in Florida and Georgia on loaded potato cars show that cars are carrying 200 barrels this year as against 125 barrels last year. In Pittsburgh, tin plate cars that carried 92 per cent. of their marked capacity on June 27 last are now being loaded to carry 98.6 per cent. In Minnesota the average carload of flour in 1916 amounted to 46,250 pounds; this year the average carload is 61,923 pounds.

"Some figures that throw a clear light on the efforts that both the shippers and the railroads are making to relieve the coal situation were supplied a few days ago by the Western Maryland Railway. A check of 540 cars of coal showed only seven cars that were loaded below marked capacity, the average loading of the cars being 111.14 per cent.

"A summary of coal mine operations for July showed that 132 railroads handling anthracite, soft coal, and lignite transported 207,429 more loaded cars from the mines than for the same month last year, an increase of 31.5 per cent., or 10,316,900 tons."

PREDICTS PEACE ALLIANCE.

World League Will Follow the War, Wadhams Believes.

Judge William H. Wadhams of General Sessions, speaking as a representative of the League to Enforce Peace, at the West Side Y. M. C. A. yesetrday, predicted that the other nations now fighting Germany would join with the United States at the end of the war for the establishment of a world league to maintain peace, based on justice, throughout the world, and to prevent the recurrence of international conflicts like the present European disaster.

"This is our war, and it is the vital struggle between the powers of autocracy and of democracy, which stands for the peace and freedom of all the peoples of the world," said Judge Wadhams. "We must meet the issue now, or autocracy will overwhelm us, as autocracy and democracy cannot exist side by side. Democracy can save itself only by assailing autocracy, and if need be, and for the time being, by imitating the force of the enemy of freedom and thus put autocracy out of the world for all time. We, who have lighted the torch of liberty, will never permit it to be extinguished."

Interrupted by frequent applause, in which a number of soldiers and sailors joined, Judge Wadhams remarked:

"I am glad to see in this audience the uniform of the United States. It is a priestly robe, my friends. The men who wear that uniform are soldiers of liberty."

"The barbarous and uncivilized methods of warfare practiced by Germany in this war," Judge Wadhams continued, "have had much to do with speeding the American people to a realization that their freedom, as well as that of the victims of this autocratic ruthlessness, was involved."

Try Barley—
Help Save the Wheat!

Barley was the first grain turned to when wheat became scarce in Europe, for barley like wheat is one of Nature's wonder grains.

Barley is famous for its high protein value, excellent flavor and its self-digesting qualities.

Always in the making of the famous food

a considerable quantity of whole barley flour has been blended with whole wheat.

This constitutes a great saving of wheat for the Government and results in a far more pleasing, nourishing and digestible food than if made of wheat alone.

The wonderfully pleasant taste of Grape-Nuts is largely due to the processing of wheat with malted barley.

BOTH QUIT IN LONG SWIM.

The scheduled forty-mile Hudson River swim between Charles Toth of Boston, holder of the American record of fourteen hour forty-seven minutes for continuous swimming, and Robert B. Dowling, a local youth, who two years ago swam around Manhattan Island in 13:45, ended yesterday before either of the principals had covered fifteen miles, with the honors going to Toth because he was the last to leave the water.

Toth quit, with the tide starting to go against him at Washington Point, after being in the water six hours three minutes. At the point where he abandoned the race he was about two miles and a half from Spuyten Duyvil. Dowling stopped because of the pain he was suffering from an injured leg at a point between 150th and 160th Streets, after he had been swimming for five hours and five minutes.

The men started from the Battery at 11:07 o'clock, and had not completed the first leg of their journey when the event was abandoned.

INDIANS FORFEIT GAME.

Umpire Gives Chicago Contest After Dilatory Actions of Players.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—With the score tied at 3 to 3, Umpire Owens forfeited today's game to Chicago, 9 to 0, in the tenth inning, because of the dilatory tactics of the Cleveland players. As a result Chicago is now seven games ahead in the pennant race.

The Cleveland players protested Owens's ruling in the tenth when, with two men on base and no one out, he called Graney out in a close play at third base. The game was delayed for ten minutes because of arguments. When the Cleveland players finally resumed, they hurled their gloves in the air and two or three of them rolled in the dirt to express their displeasure.

PONTIAC LEADS IN A MESS OF WINDS

Has Best of a Weird Afternoon's Racing in Handicap Class Contest.

It was a rather difficult job for the craft of the Handicap Racing Class to pull of their eleventh annual race yesterday afternoon. They finally succeeded, but the light at Execution Rock was twinkling and all the yachts at anchor were showing their riding lights before the Ogeemah limped across the course close to 7 o'clock last evening before the event became a part of the yachting history of the year.

To begin with, there was not enough wind to bring some of the yachts which had intended to start to the line off the entrance to Echo Bay, off New Rochelle, and the start was delayed for an hour to let them get in. Pontiac, one of the first division of the yachts, was so late in getting in from her home port at the Indian Harbor Yacht Club at Greenwich that she accepted a handicap of thirteen minutes and thirteen seconds in going across the line to get into the race at all.

Acadian and Sirene, which had come across the Sound from Manhasset Bay, could not reach the starting line until after 3 o'clock, too late to start with their respective classes, so Handicapper Tower gave them a special race by themselves over a short course to Scotch Cape, then across to Prospect Point and back, a distance of seven and one-half miles. Veda had much trouble in getting to the line that she went away thirty-one minutes behind the rest of her class. Two of the craft which started, Ariel and Twinkle, found the light airs so little to their liking that they sailed only a part of the course and then made for their home ports, abandoning the race.

When the yachts were sent away on their journey over the course, which took them up the Sound to a buoy off Parsonage Point before they began their trip across the Sound, there was barely wind enough to fill their sails. What there was came from the southward, barely pushing them over the line, and for an hour it was a succession of puffs and calm spots in which the skippers could hardly hold steerageway.

Then there came a succession of puffs of wind more erratic than any seen on the Sound in the experience of the skippers. For a half hour the wind blew from the southeast, southwest, northwest, and north in an area of a couple of square miles at the same time, as shown by the direction taken by yachts trying to move over the waters at different points in the vision of the handicap fellows. Some of them were reaching while others were beating and still others with balloomers out were running before what wind there was. George Granbery, President of the Handicap Class, skipper of the Anita in this race and one of the most experienced sailors on the Sound, said that never in his years of experience had he seen such puzzling conglomeration of winds and puffs and calm spots in a general potpourri of near breezes as the yachtsmen had to contend with yesterday.

A most singular fact about the racing was that Pontiac, which had started thirteen minutes after the rest of her class were away, had such good fortune in hitting the puffs of wind and dodging the soft spots that her sails were kept filled most of the afternoon. She actually overhauled all four boats which started in the class against her, made the first buoy in front of the fleet, and then saucily sailed away toward the Long Island shore carrying the breeze with her and leaving all her competitors floundering in the doldrums. She went across the Sound with the wind at her back, and actually led all the fleet to the finish on actual time, making the tour of the course in a trifle less than four hours, a story which best tells how very light the wind was, as the distance traveled was but eleven and one-half miles.

Anita and Arvia, which got away with all the best of the start, were ten minutes behind Pontiac at the finish, Anita beating Arvia twenty-five seconds in actual time, though being beaten on time allowance by eleven seconds.

The winners in the respective classes were Pontiac in the first division, Clare in the second, Barbara in the third, and Sirene in the special class over the short course.

TRAVERS AND LOW BEATEN.

Kirkby and Mackie Win Four-Ball Match at Baltusrol, 1 Up.

Stress of business forced a hurried return to Boston of Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford, the Hub's successful golfers, but Baltusrol was treated to another exhibition yesterday, which while it was not equal to the display of Saturday, brought out a large gallery. It was an eighteen-hole four-ball journey with Oswald Kirkby and Isaac Mackie, professional at Canoe Brook, pitted against Jerome D. Travers and George Low, professional at Baltusrol. The first named pair won by 1 up.

Travers was bothered by a severe cold and was unable to play his usual excellent game. Kirkby played better than on Saturday and aided by Mackie had a best ball score of 73 against that of 74 for Travers and Low. The Baltusrol professional did most of the playing for his side and started off with a win at the first hole in 4. Kirkby squared the contest at the fourth by a fine mashie shot. Low again went to the front at the fifth when he chipped close and holed out his put for a 3.

Kirkby and Mackie each holed long putts at the eighth to square the match again only to have Low sink another putt at the ninth and turn toward home up. Kirkby won the tenth with a long put and Low took the twelfth. Mackie's twenty-foot putt at the fourteenth decided the affair.

HAGEN AND BARNES VICTORS

ROCHESTER, Sept. 9.—Walter B. Hagen of this city, present Western open champion, paired with Jim Barnes of Whitemarsh, defeated Gil Nicholls of Great Neck and Alex Smith of Wykagyl in a Red Cross golf match played on the Oak Hill Country Club links here today by 2 up. Hagan and Barnes, who had a 71 best ball score for the morning round, were 7 up at the end of the first eighteen holes. Nicholls established a new course record of 69 in the afternoon.

SILENT SISTER IS BEATEN.

Yesterday's racing on the Harlem Speedway, marking the seventh matinée of the Summer meeting of the Road Drivers' Association, witnessed the downfall of J. Leonard's bay mare Silent Sister, the first defeat this horse has sustained since the opening of the mid-Summer meeting. E. Carpenter's trotter, Bessie Baron, triumphed over the fast Leonard mare, but not until four keenly contested and interesting heats had been staged.

In the first brush Bessie Baron showed the way to Silent Sister by a small margin, but the latter came back and took the honors of the second heat. In the third dash down the half-mile stretch A. T. Meckel's Fox Dean scampered to the front near the finish to win the honors of the heat, but the fourth and decisive brush found the Carpenter mare showing the way in impressive fashion.

The match race between the side-wheeler, Clover Patch, the pacing queen of the Speedway for the last three years, and Mittie Bedworth, both owned by the veteran J. A. Murphy, was undecided after two heats had been run, each horse going the honors of one heat. The veteran driver, Dave McClary, held the reins on Clover Patch and drove her to victory in the first heat.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., Sept. 9.—At 3 o'clock, the time scheduled for the starting of the interclub race of the "star" class over the course of the Port Washington Yacht Club in Manhasset Bay this afternoon, there was scarcely a ripple on the water. The starting signal was fired at 4 o'clock, and soon after the fleet got under way.

Charles E. Hyde won in his Hydra by a margin of 17 seconds over his old rival, E. V. Willis, in the Altair. The victory of the Hyde boat makes the owner a contender for the season's championship. Mr. Hyde fell back in the series at the beginning of the season, but regained lost ground after he refitted his little yacht with new sails and made some other improvements tending to increase the speed.

Forty-five seconds behind the Altair came the Zete, owned and sailed by George W. Elder, Jr. G. A. Corry, owner of the Little Dipper, was ill, and his entry was sailed by E. C. Unitt.

RIVAL FINN STARS RUN RECORD RACE

Kyronen Beats Kolehmainen in Three-Mile Struggle Decided in Fast Time.

Villar Kyronen, the young Finnish distance runner, again demonstrated his superiority over his brother Finn, Hannes Kohlehmainen, former distance champion, yesterday in a three-mile race held under the auspices of the Scandinavian-American Athletic League at Ulmer Park, L. I. To Kyronen, in addition to the prestige of victory, also goes the credit for a new league record for the distance. His time was 15:27, eclipsing the mark of 15:37 held by Kolehmainen since 1913.

The two Finns made the race from the start. The lead constantly alternated, with neither of them being any appreciable distance in front to the one-mile point. From then until the last lap they raced practically abreast of each other. With the finish line in sight, the real test came, and in this the youth and stamina of Kyronen told.

About 200 yards from the worsted Kolehmainen showed in front, going at a fast clip, with Kyronen clinging doggedly at his heels. Kolehmainen led for the next 100 yards, trying vainly to shake off his fellow-Finn, and then, when within about seventy-five yards of the tape, Kyronen came with a wonderful burst of speed to win by about three inches.

This defeat marked the second the veteran Kolehmainen had sustained in the afternoon. His first was in the half-mile run, in which he was second to J. Pietila, a clubmate of Kyronen's, who broke the tape a winner with a convincing margin separating.

The two events were the features of an interesting program. In the day's competition two league records went by the boards, the other, in addition to the mark for the three-mile run, being the twelve-pound hammer throw, in which J. Ranta, Kaleva A. C., tossed the weight 131 feet 4 inches.

The point championship of the league went to the representatives of the Kaleva A. C., who compiled a total of 31 tallies yesterday. This, with their points for the Spring championship games, gave them a combined total of 55 tallies. The Swedish-American A. C. was second with 41 points.

Walker Whiteside, to whom the Oriental poppy has apparently become a habit, appeared in still another yellow-skinned character part at the Fulton last Satruday night. The theme which in "Typhoon" yielded a stirring melodrama—at least in the original version of that much-adapted play—was made to do service again, and this time in a contemporary American setting.

The fact that we are now allied with Japan and diplomatically on the friendliest footing receives at least a formal recognition. This Baron Takada, who draws into his toils a young West Pointer, making him elicit from a brother at Annapolis valuable naval secrets, is not in the employ of the Japanese Embassy here. In fact he is finally repudiated by them and commits hara-kiri. But it is clearly evident throughout that he is meant to represent the real and abiding purpose toward us of the Imperial Japanese Government which is to meet and master us on the Pacific. Of the truth of this allegation, or of the propriety of repeating it now, nothing need be said here. It is enough to report the fact. Our present occupation is with the play as a play.

We are asked to suppose that a stalwart young American six-footer, with no trace of the Oriental in his mind or countenance, is the son of a Japanese nobleman by an American wife. Then we are asked to believe that the lad has only to realize his "mongrel" birth to swear allegiance to the Mikado and work at the bidding of Baron Takada against the people whom all his life he has regarded—and still in his heart regards—as his own. That is not all. He is a West Pointer, and the victim of his underhand work is a Lieutenant in the navy, with whom his sister is in love.

He induces the Lieutenant to look upon the grape juice when it is brown—and succeeds in securing the plan of a new secret naval base in the Pacific. Yes, even though his sister is present, the beloved of the salt-sea man, and does her best to second Secretary Daniels in his endeavors to keep the navy dry.

If such things as these can be, any or all of them, we are, indeed, as the poisonous Takada insinuates, an inferior people; the Japanese are, indeed, predestined to conquer us, and Josephus Daniels is so right that not only our salt-sea men, but their salt-sea ships should be dry, dry, dry forever.

Materials no less preposterous have, of course, been many times worked up into effective melodrama. What has the dignity of our people, the honor of West Point, or—dread climax—the grape juiciness of our salty defenders, to do among friends of that genre? But for two acts "The Pawn" is as slow as it is preposterous, and, though the third act strikes a livelier pace, the improvement comes too late and at best seems too slight to save the evening.

Mr. Whiteside repeats his previous rendering of the villainous Oriental. His face is cadaverous rather than yellow; his deftest insinuations are signalized by a point blank stare, and his subtleties of gesture are aimed at the last man in the top gallery. To detect a spy like that the drunkenest sailor would need no spyglass. The characterization has, no doubt, a certain obvious popular quality, effective enough in a credible story well told. Here everything is against him.

As the half-Japanese sister of the traitorous West Pointer, Marjorie Wood revels in a delightfully fresh touch in what is called emotional acting. Avoiding all the old cat-tearing demonstrations, she gives a sincere and very womanly rendering of the passion in hand, and the effect is, in the main, astonishingly vigorous and moving. The performance rises above its setting like a cameo.

Fell Into Manhole Feb. 8; Found.

The body of William Harding of 1,012 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, who fell into a manhole through which workmen were shoveling snow at Greene and Washington Streets in that borough on Feb. 8, was found yesterday by a launch from Harbor Squad A at the foot of Grand Street, Brooklyn, in the East River. Harding was on his way home, and, walking rapidly, failed to notice the open manhole in the dusk. He stepped into it and was carried away by the rapid water.

Columbia Mid-Month Specials

Here are some records that we couldn't wait until the end of the month to bring out. Their names will tell you something, but hearing them played will explain why we announce them as Mid-Month Specials.

From Me to Mandy Lee is a duet coupling the alternately commanding tenor voices of Campbell and Burr, while the cello moans a plaintive obbligato. If you like tenor duets you will want this record. On the reverse, Irving Kaufman sings a vigorous solo, I'm All Bound 'Round with the Mason Dixon Line. Note the way the title sings itself.

SHOW FIRST GOLDWYN FILM.

The first film to be put out by the Goldwyn Company, which embarked in the motion-picture business a year ago with a diversity of talent at its command, is being exhibited this week at the Strand. Among those whom Goldwyn attracted to its standard was Mae Marsh, and it is Miss Marsh who now appears in the first release,a picturization of Margaret Mayo's play, "Polly of the Circus."

Bulletins emanating from the Goldwyn office from time to time during the past year have indicated a sincere attempt to improve the motion picture all along the line, and it is altogether possible that the new concern will eventually bring about some readjustment of picture values. The first release, while not so noteworthy as to elevate Goldwyn immediately above all its competitors, is at least a careful and painstaking piece of work.

Being concerned largely with circus life, Miss Mayo's play naturally lends itself nicely to the films. The circus episodes, of course, are greatly enlarged upon: there is, in fact, a complete circus on the screen. Accordingly, the picture will undoubtedly have great vogue among the young folk quite independent of the story. Miss Marsh is equal to all the demands made upon her as Polly. A good performance, also, is given by Vernon Steel as the minister.

Another event of importance in the film world took place yesterday at the Rialto, where Elsie Ferguson, who was lately induced to desert the legitimate stage for a limited period, made her photodramatic début in an adaptation of Robert Hitchens's "Barbary Sheep." On the screen Miss Ferguson's sensitive beauty becomes almost Gibsonesque, and she doubtless will be able to command a huge salary from the movie magnates just as long as she chooses to employ her talents in that direction.

The Hichens novel is presented with a wealth of atmosphere, and the many fine pictures go far to justify the production. Its theme of the lure of the desert, however, is a trifle too delicate to be made into an effective picture.

Young Russian Violinist Journeys for Two Months to Reach Here.

The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau announced last night the arrival in New York of the Russian violinist, Jascha Heifetz, accompanied by his parents and two younger sisters. The family journeyed for two months across Siberia, through Manchuria and Japan, over the Pacific to San Francisco and thence to this city. Mr. Heifetz, who is not yet twenty years old, has for the last four years been a rising star in Europe, where he made tours of the Scandinavian countries and Germany, playing in Berlin just before the war. In Petrograd he was a fellow-pupil with Elman and Zimbalist under Leopold Auer. He will make his first appearance in New York on Oct. 27 at Carnegie Hall.

The Metropolitan Musical Bureau also announced yesterday its artists' activities for the coming season. Mischa Elman will make a coast to coast tour, opening at Madison Square Garden on Sept. 27. Anna Case will give a recital in Carnegie Hall on Oct. 14. Maria Barrientos will appear in concerts in January and February before rejoining the Metropolitan opera. Marie Rappold, Giovanni Martinelli, Pasquale Amato, Thomas Chalmers, and Giuseppe De Luca have early concert tours, and the Metropolitan Orchestra, under Richard Hageman, will go on the road in the Spring festivals.

The Russian Symphony Orchestra, which finished last season with a tour of eighteen weeks, playing before the President in Washington and covering the country as far West as Kansas City and Chicago, has reassembled for its fifteenth year under the leadership of Modest Altschuler, a pupil of Arensky and Taneieff and graduate of the Conservatory of Moscow under Rubinstein. The representative of the new Russia in this country, Ambassador Boris A. Bakhmeteff, has accepted the honorary Presidency of the Russian Symphony Society for the coming year.

Beginning Oct. 11 the concert schedule at Aeolian Hall is full up twice daily till next May. The first leading artist to reappear is Rosita Renard, the Chilean pianist, on Oct. 13.

The Strand Theatre's "afternoon symphony concerts" will be started this week, when Adriano Ariani conducts a program from Brahms, Mendelssohn, Saint-Saëns, Rabaud, Schumann, Raff, and Massenet.

The Oratorio Society on Thursday begins rehearsals for Pierne's "The Children's Crusade" under the direction of Walter Damrosch in the chamber music room of Carnegie Hall.

Frieda Benneche will sing for the National War Work Council during November. Thomas Egan sang recently to the soldiers at Van Cortlandt Park, and Albert Spalding played to the camp at Mineola.

The Institute of Musical Art announces the opening, on Oct. 15, of its thirteenth year under the direction of Frank Damrosch and under charter from the Regents of the State of New York.

The Humanitarian Cult's concert in Madison Square Garden on Sept. 27 is to engage Schumann-Heink, Alda, Elman, Grainger, Martinelli, and De Luca.

David Bispham has issued an appeal for the Music School Settlement for Colored People, which seeks to reduce a mortgage on the house it has occupied for six years.

Reinald Werrenrath has received an offer to go into musical comedy, which he has not as yet accepted. The baritone announces three song recitals at Aeolian Hall this season.

Ernest Schelling, the pianist, is a Captain in the army, having left his Summer home at Bar Harbor recently to report at Washington for service with the United States Reserve Corps.

George M. Cohan's "Over There," the "there" being somewhere in France, is said to have been widely adopted by the American soldiers as their own future battle song.

Hazel Carpenter, pianist, announces her third season on the concert stage under the direction of H. F. Beck.

Would Insure Soldiers and Sailors.

In an advertisement inserted in THE TIMES this morning "the 130,178 members of the Humanitarian Cult and the public at large" are urged to send telegrams to Congressmen advocating "liberal insurance for our soldiers and sailors—our protectors—and their families—and proper protection for those who are wounded or maimed, as well as their dependents." The advertisement maintains that governmental military insurance would be "a splendid investment from a cold-blooded standpoint of dollars and cents," and adds that it is demanded by the cult "for reasons purely humanitarian." One of the arguments used to support the cult's position is that "our great President has recently recommended the granting of liberal insurance." The advertisement is signed by Misha Appelbaum, founder and leader of the cult.

WILSON FAVORS BIBLE PLAN.

Indorses $400,000 Project to Send Scriptures to Soldiers.

The American Bible Society, which has undertaken to obtain a fund of $400,000 to furnish men in the army and navy with the Scriptures, announced yesterday the receipt of a letter from President Wilson indorsing the movement. The letter was directed to Dr. John Fox, Corresponding Secretary of the society, and read:

My dear Dr. Fox:

I am glad to have an opportunity to indorse the effort of the American Bible Society to procure a fund of $400,000 to cover the expenses of supplying the men in the army and navy with Bibles. This is an object which I am sure all Christian people will wish to see accomplished. I hope that it may be, for the sake of the men who are going to the front. They will need the support of the only book from which they can get it.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

The society announced that it will supply the Y. M. C. A. with 1,000,000 New Testaments to be distributed at training camps and cantonments, and in addition will print several thousand copies of the Gospel of Mark, with French and English in parallel columns. The purpose of this is to facilitate the study of French by our soldiers and sailors.

Bevo

How does this sound as a suggestion for a meal some day during this hot weather? Cold boiled ham, potato salad, rye bread, and ice-cold Bevo.

Bevo was made with meals and "between meals" in mind. It's an all-'round soft drink. Enjoyable and refreshing all by itself and of just the flavor to go with any food—hot or cold—and to make it taste better. Pure—wholesome—nutritious.

WOMAN CONDUCTS BAND.

Miss Edia Soeller conducted her military band of fifty men in a special concert on the Mall in Central Park last evening, when the last of the Summer crowds filled the benches and promenades as well as the terraces of the Casino near by. The woman leader in neat uniform was a novelty to the spectators, and probably the first to wield a baton in New York's public band concerts.

A native of Sweden, she varied the more familiar music of Wagner, Liszt and Tschaikowsky. Meyerbeer, Ambrose Thomas, and Arthur Sullivan, with examples of Scandinavian airs by Kuhlau, Ole Bull, and Vladimir Soeller. The last named was her father, formerly leader of the Copenhagen band, with which Miss Soeller played when a child as soloist on the flute. She displayed authority and musical skill in her work as conductor last evening.

Arnold Volpe and his orchestra had a farewell program at the City College Stadium last night, and another by Ward's Band next Sunday in Battery Park will end the Park Department's long schedule of more than a hundred concerts this year.

LIGHT ON SWEDEN'S ROLE.

When Count LUXBURG, in the dispatches he sent to Germany through the Swedish Legation at Buenos Aires, recommended that the Argentine ships whose sailing dates he gave be either spared or "sunk without a trace being left," he meant that if sunk the crew and passengers should be murdered to a man. But why? So that the German Government should be able to state upon its honor that they had not been sunk at all, and that, therefore, no reparation need be made to Argentina. If the honor and good faith of the German Government were not already a matter upon which the case is made up, this would illuminate it. If we did not already know how many things a German diplomat is called upon to do that diplomats from other lands would be insulted at the suspicion of doing, this would illuminate that question, too.

But no such illumination is needed. The illumination that was needed was on the part Sweden is playing in the war, and this, too, is fortunately lit up with a blinding glare by the revelation of what has been going on in Buenos Aires, with its inevitable implication that similar things have been going on in other capitals where Swedish and German diplomats can meet. That Germany was capable of using the sacred immunity of a diplomat's correspondence for the purpose of forwarding sailing dates to waiting submarines we already knew; it had been demonstrated in Norway. But that these unsuspecting ships were being betrayed to their fate by the medium of the carefully respected diplomatic correspondence of Sweden we did not know. Now that we know it, much about Germany's uncanny knowledge of what goes on in other countries is clear to us.

Of course, the unfortunate Minister in Buenos Aires who forwarded LUXBURG's frightful communications under cover of his own sacred diplomatic character will be made a scapegoat. There is no legal evidence as yet which involves the Swedish Government. But international courtesy cannot be stretched to the point of endangering the Allies' cause or the lives of their sailors. The Allies may have to accept Sweden's forthcoming protestations that she knew nothing of what was going on in her legation at Buenos Aires. But they should insist, since these unfortunate accidents happen, that Sweden consent to forego during the rest of the war the international courtesy by which her diplomatic correspondence is allowed to pass the censorship. Too many queer things have been happening. The British Government has already had occasion to warn Sweden, and this time there should be no more warnings. If Sweden should feel humiliated by this plain intimation that she cannot be trusted, she has invited the humiliation.

As for Argentina, her education on the subject of German faith is progressing. She is at present in about that stage of negotiation with Germany that we were at the time the Arabic was sunk, but events like this may hurry the process.

"WHAT WILL HAPPEN THEN?"

"Some people seem to imagine," says Sir EDWARD CARSON, "that we have only to conclude a treaty with Germany and all will be well. But I should like to ask what is to happen then."

If we conclude a treaty with the present Germany, unrepentant, glorying in the things that have horrified the rest of the world for three years, and still yielding implicit obedience to the men who ordered those things, it is perfectly certain "what is to happen then." If the treaty calls for disarmament, no nation will disarm until Germany has disarmed, for none will be so simple as to take her word; and Germany will not disarm. Whatever Germany may be pledged to do by the treaty, no nation will have any expectation of her doing it unless it is to her interest. The terms of the treaty will be dead from the moment it is signed.

The only thing gained will be the stoppage of the war. Immediately upon that every nation in the world will begin to increase its armament in preparation for Germany's certain and inevitable renewal of the war. Conscription will become a permanent feature of the life of every nation from Canada to Chile, and from Scotland to Greece, and from India to China, and from Egypt to South Africa. To support these permanent armies every nation will have to resort to the levying of undreamed-of taxes, which will have to be kept up and increased from year to year, until the tax-gatherer takes most of the profits of capital and the wage of labor, and by reason of these conditions the cost of living will increase proportionately.

But the guarding of the nations against Germany's active military assaults will be only a part of its necessary preparation. They will be on guard also against her intrigues. They have learned to dread these no less than her arms. Each nation, knowing that the others are filled with German spies and domestic traitors who are tempting them to align themselves with Germany in her next war, will be watching not only Germany but the others. Intrigues will be suspected where they do not exist, and they will exist where they are not suspected. Since nations which succumb to Germany's temptations adopt Germany's rules of conduct, the good faith of no nation will be safe from suspicion. The world will be in a constant ferment of suspicion, and spies and traitors will have their millennium. That is what is to happen next. And yet, in the face of this, Germany pretends that the demand that she abandon the system which thus menaces the world is an insolent interference with her home affairs, a thing with which outsiders have no concern.

GARYITE AND ANTI-GARYITE TAMMANY.

Judge HYLAN, emerging from too long a silence, clings tenderly to "the little red schoolhouse" where his youth was nourished, and points a full hand of scorn at the Gary plan and the Rockefeller Foundation. As these demon forms will be on hand, through a campaign not yet begun, for the Judge to shake accusing locks and fingers at, today THE TIMES will content itself with doing a favor, two favors, in fact, to the Brooklyn friend of the people.

Does he know that, before the Rockefeller Foundation was revealed in all its plutocratic ugliness as the guardian of the Gary plan, the United States Steel Corporation filled that loathly office?

Does he know that the appropriation granted by the Board of Estimate on July 3 for extending the Gary plan to nine more Bronx schoolhouses was voted for by Borough President CONNOLLY of Queens and Borough President VAN NAME of Richmond? Until Tammany officials have learned to respect the Tammany platform, what can Judge HYLAN, discordant himself already with another Tammany candidate, do? Will nobody get up a complete Tammany concordance?

THE NEW BOND ISSUE.

Secretary MCADOO in his statement before the House Committee on Ways and Means stated with convincing clearness the sufficient reason for making the forthcoming issue of emergency bonds subject to the income super-tax. The normal rate will not apply to incomes derived from these bonds, but interest received from them would be counted as part of the taxpayers' incomes to which all rates higher than the normal rate are applicable. "The proposed limited exemption is not discrimination against the rich," said Mr. MCADOO. "They will share with people of modest means the benefit of exemption from normal taxes. They will not, however, be able to obtain through the purchase of Government bonds exemption from the burdens incident to the established policy of the United States of imposing taxes on an ascending scale graduated according to the means of the taxpayer."

It was inevitable that sooner or later war bonds would be made subject to the income tax. As the war proceeded and the volume of bonds increased, exemption from the tax would have been a cause of just complaint and it would have cut off a very considerable source of revenue from the Government. The Liberty bonds were very largely taken by persons of moderate means; subscriptions in sums of $10,000 or less aggregated $1,296,684,850. Mr. MCADOO points out that "the field of the great middle class and the well-to-do people of moderate means was barely touched, and the belief is that 4 per cent. bonds exempt from the normal tax will appeal much more strongly to such people than did the first Liberty bonds." With successive bond issues there will be large holdings of these securities by persons of considerable means. It would be unjust and inequitable to exempt them from higher income taxes.

The new bonds will bear interest at 4 per cent., and holders of the 3½ per cent. Liberty bonds will have the option of converting them into the 4 per cent. bonds. All the small holders of the Liberty bonds will naturally exercise that option, as the tax exemption is without value to them. Large bondholders can, if they wish, retain the 3½ per cent. and escape the income tax. Their number is not great, and their aggregate holding is only a small part of the $2,000,000,000 issue.

In the debate which preceded the passing of the Bond bill by the House, Speaker CLARK took the floor to argue in favor of what he called a "fifty-fifty arrangement" for financing the war; that is, 50 per cent. of taxes and 50 per cent. of bonds. We may judge the wisdom of this policy by considering its effect. The estimated expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30 next, after deducting receipts under existing laws, will be $10,448,871,000, from which the $2,000,000,000 of bonds already issued may be deducted, leaving substantially $8,500,000,000 to be provided for. Speaker CLARK's "arrangement" would make it necessary for Congress to impose taxes of more than $4,000,000,000 for the current fiscal year. If the Speaker will consult the members of the Ways and Means Committee, hard beset in their effort to find sources of taxation yielding $2,500,000,000, he will, we are confident, be moved to doubt the practicability, if not the wisdom, of his plan. Great Britain in the fourth year of the war raises only 26 per cent. of its revenues by taxation, our other allies a much smaller percentage.

Senator MCCUMBER, in discussing the income tax rates, said that if he were opposed to the war and wanted to make it unpopular, he "would make the taxation just as heavy as possible and have it all paid this year." Speaker CLARK is not enthusiastic about the war, but we must assume that he is enthusiastic about the United States of America, and he must know that the policy he advocates would be ruinous. The duration of the war can hardly be guessed at. The Government must be in a position to raise great sums for its prosecution every year while it lasts. To take $4,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000 from the people by taxation each year would dry up innumerable large sources of revenue and bond subscriptions and produce a stagnation of business. Wealth in the hands of those earning it is not put in barrels to be kept in cellars, it is reinvested productively, it creates more wealth, and it is by the uninterrupted production of wealth in the country that the Treasury can be in a position to meet the immense requirements of the war. "I am opposed to loading this war debt onto succeeding generations," says Speaker CLARK, but it is for the benefit of succeeding generations as well as for our own benefit that the war expense is incurred. Will not coming generations be altogether willing to pay the costs of the war which saved them from the perils of enslavement to Germany? That argument is so shallow and worthless that it is surprising to see it advanced even by an opponent of war. Secretary MCADOO believes that these bonds will be redeemed within thirty years. A great part of the present generation will pay certainly its full share of the taxes levied for paying off the debt.

The House has passed the Bond bill, the Senate has defeated the extreme profits tax proposals of LA FOLLETTE, JOHNSON, and the other obstructionists.

With the demonstration that the obstructionists are impotent for anything but delay, Congress will be able to carry into speedy enactment the Bond bill and the Tax bill. There is no possible reason why the program of legislation before Congress should not be speedily completed and adjournment reached. The President, as is known, will welcome an adjournment, and the country will learn with satisfaction that the session is ended.

HYPNOTIZED.

The first procedure of the Reichstag, the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger informs us, will be to send "a fitting answer to WILSON." Whether the answer will be fitting or not depends on the point of view. Vorwärts does not think it would be fitting to answer "that WILSON is a rascal and that "America is corrupt," which is what it apprehends the Lokal-Anzeiger has in mind. It may be fitting in the heated minds of the Pan-Germans, but it is evident that the "ravings" of Mr. WILSON are, for some strange reason, beginning to attract serious attention among other Germans, and even, impossible as it seems, to influence their judgment. Else why does the Hamburger Nachrichten complain that "WILSON has apparently hypnotized" the Erzberger majority in the Reichstag Main Committee? True, it says this only to argue that the Erzberger majority is really a minority, so far as the opinion of the German people is concerned, and this may be true for anything we know; but when before now did any influential German minority become "hypnotised" by the arguments of an enemy in arms against the German Government, and how far is that hypnotism going to spread, and how long will it take its spreading to become dangerous?

The German mind is a queer machine, but it must certainly have some things in common with other minds, and it must be that in time that mind will begin to doubt a policy which always replies to argument with epithets. ERZBERGER and his followers, like Vorwärts and its followers, have German minds, and yet they doubt that policy so vociferously that the Nachrichten thinks them "hypnotised." Other Germans are going to be hypnotized in the same way; this black magic of the President's has not yet finished its wicked work. Surely the Nachrichten may take comfort out of the fact that thousands of Hamburgers attended a meeting at which they protested "like a hurricane" against "WILSON's hypocritical criticism," and no doubt thousands more feel the same way about it; but what of the thousands who did not attend the meeting, and who pondered uncomfortably, as ERZBERGER and Vorwärts have pondered uncomfortably, over the President's words and the insistent question whether, after all, he may not be telling the truth? And if there were no such pondering thousands in Hamburg, but only pondering hundreds, who is going to measure the rate at which those hundreds will increase as the dreaded fourth Winter of war comes nearer?

"A fitting answer to WILSON" would be one which would not merely hurl at him the scorn and anger of German loyalism, but one which would disarm these oddly potent words of his, one which would shatter his spell, one which would paralyze his hypnotizing hands. The danger is not that the stalwarts will not be indignant enough, but that the hypnotized will stay hypnotized and increase in numbers. A fitting answer will be one which will answer the President's declaration that the obstacle to peace is the inability of other nations to take the Kaiser's word, and that when that obstacle is removed the German people can have peace. Until that declaration is answered hypnotism will grow, and voices "like a hurricane" will roar against its growth in vain.

THE RED CROSS ABROAD.

Chairman HENRY P. DAVISON's report to the American people on the activities of the American Red Cross in Europe should be read by everybody who can get it, in order to gain an idea of the great scope of that institution's work. The comprehensive nature of its care for our soldiers abroad and for the war sufferers in France is, if not fully understood, at least imagined by most people; but its labors reach into many other lands, of whose great needs we have had no more than a hint.

For instance, we have heard much of Belgium and little of Armenia, yet Armenia is far the greater sufferer. The Davison report, which says that nearly a million Armenians were massacred or driven to death in 1915 and the remainder deported "into the desert regions where self-support was impossible"; that 500,000 Greeks have been deported after them; that in one town there is a call "to provide for 10,000 fatherless children," and that 2,000,000 people in Western Asia are saved from death only by the constant aid of the American Red Cross, gives an idea of tragedies even greater than Belgium's. Serbia, with four-fifths of her army gone and her civilian population "harried over the face of Europe," is another appalling picture. But everywhere the American Red Cross follows hard on the track of ruin, and is not distracted from the rescue by the vast demands imposed on it by America's entry into the war. The report gives an illuminating idea of the way in which American organizing skill rises above the emergency.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Language Lessons in School.

From several parts of the country come reports that the local educational authorities have stopped the teaching of the German language in the public schools. This has been done even in Hoboken, where, by people whose knowledge of that city's population is as far from up to date as are most of the jokes made about it, the assumption survives that Hoboken, if not exactly a German city, is ruled by men of German birth or descent, and sure on that account to insist on the retention of German in the public school curriculum.

For adequate reasons, the news that any American city has ceased to waste, and worse than waste, the time of its public school teachers and its public school pupils in order to give the latter what is in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, if not in 999 out of 1,000, an entirely worthless smattering of German, might be commended as indicative of increasing intelligence in that community. It is somewhat to be regretted, however, that in so many places the reform has been made as a sort of war measure and evidences hostility to a country with which the United States is at war rather than a realization of the fact that to teach any foreign language whatever in the public schools is a serious mistake, nowhere committed with any better excuse than that it gratifies the racial vanity of a greater or less number of parents.

Really to learn German would be not less useful to young Americans now than it was in the past or will be in the future. The war has not decreased any value that German literature ever possessed, and to speak, write, and understand German remains an accomplishment about as desirable as like facility in any other foreign language and more desirable than in the case of many that could be mentioned. The one sound argument is against studying any such language in the lower grades of our public schools. For the great majority of the children attending them, those grades must give all the formal education they will ever get, and it is vitally important that their scanty opportunities should be utilized to distinctly practical advantage.

It is a curious and significant truth that those who advocate the teaching of one or another foreign language in the public schools are themselves competent to give their children better instruction in the only language that interests them than they could possibly get in any school, no matter how good.

His Division Really a Delusion.

Among the more impassioned of the statesmen who opposed and defeated the confirmation of Mr. PERKINS as President of the State Food Commission was Senator WAGNER, leader of the Democratic minority, and the argument he emphasized most was the somewhat disquieting one that in his opinion 98 per cent. of the producers of foodstuffs in this State believed Mr. PERKINS to be antagonistic to their interests.

Whether the Senator spoke from exact knowledge or just made a courageous guess is a question to which there is no available answer of demonstrable accuracy, but, judging from the fact that the other opponents of the Governor's choice found no fault with his statement, it can safely be concluded that they, too, were of the same mind, and certainly none of them manifested any more than he an appreciation of the possibility that the consumers of foodstuffs are even more numerous than the producers, and that they also have "interests" not altogether unworthy of consideration in times like these.

Senator WAGNER and his co-workers in the Senate apparently did not realize that they had divided the inhabitants of the State into two classes, and had done a serious ill-service to the class for which alone they seemed to be concerned. So divide us they did, however, and the disservice lies in their obvious implication that the interests of the two classes are different and adverse. If that were true it would not be judicious to admit it in regard to either, but it is not true except on the lamentably short-sighted theory that only immediate profits are worthy of thought, and that it is the right, and even the duty, of producer and consumer alike each to exploit the other to the extent of his present ability, regardless of future consequences to both.

That theory is not accepted by the truly wise any more than it is by the truly virtuous. Far preferable to it from every standpoint higher than the one formulated in the mean phrase, "business is business," is the theory that the real interests of all good citizens are the same, that for prosperity long to continue it must be shared with a fairly close approach to equity between consumers and producers, and that any ruthless exploitation of either class by the other will in the end be ruinous to those who are guilty of it.

Arguing for Further Exemptions.

A plea of no little force is made by THEODORE HOUGH, Dean of the Medical Department of Virginia University, in favor of extending to first year students in the medical schools the exemption from immediate draft into the army that already has been accorded to students more advanced in their studies. Dr. HOUGH recognized and admitted the danger that to do this might turn the medical schools into a safe asylum for a greater or less number of "slackers," but he contended that the risk could be avoided, or at any rate made negligible, by limiting the added exemption to students who had declared their intention to study medicine before the United States entered the war.

Only in this way, he insisted, could the medical schools be saved from losing all their students as soon as the present classes are graduated, and, as nobody knows how long the war is going to last, that prospect is not to be contemplated with composure, either as regards our armies or the civilian population.

The problem, however, is not thus easily to be solved. Even if Dr. HOUGH's suggestion—and it is a good suggestion—were followed, the evil day, the possible coming of which with reason disquiets him, would be postponed only a single year. That is something, and probably it would be enough, but there still might come a perilous break in the oncoming procession of physicians and surgeons.

Perhaps the solution of the problem lies in admitting to the medical schools only those students who, in the judgment of experts, are fitted to achieve professional success, and whose good faith is a matter of high probability.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In The Boston Herald recently I read an article entitled "New Marine Flag Designed by Bostonian." Now that we have finally awakened to the realization that we need a merchant marine, and are fairly on the way to have it, it naturally follows that we should have a flag to symbolize it.

Judging from the description, this flag, "a white background, on which is shown the national shield in full colors, red, white, and blue, supported by a blue anchor," would suggest a fairly attractive design, although I would favor, instead of the anchor, either the shield alone or the shield surmounted by the American eagle, which, aside from its ever-striking effect, might symbolize the winging of American trade throughout the world, and would be decidedly more appropriate and a better design, embodying in it also that psychological something which the spread eagle of America always inspires.

The eagle is a national symbol, the anchor may be and often is used by any little yacht club, and savors more of a local club flag than of a national emblem.

The description of the article goes on to say that the new shield on this new flag is flanked on the left with the letters "U S A," and on the right by "S B." (Shipping Board.) This seems to me about as ill-planned an idea for a national merchant marine flag as could be imagined.

First of all a flag is a symbol. Then why label it? If it cannot be flown enough so as to be recognized throughout the seas, then we would better not have it at all—at least, we might have the good taste and a sense of the fitness of things to refrain from labeling it—classing it with the title flag of every steamboat company. Britain does not feel the necessity of plastering signboard letters on her symbol of merchant marine; neither should we. It detracts from its dignity. Furthermore, for what reason should the flag of our merchant marine embody the letters "S B" (Shipping Board) or represent any board or commission?

HARVEST IN FLANDERS.

Strange harvest for a fertile land!—
This year the poppies bloom to greet
But only crosses, row by row,

In Flanders fields no women sing,
No men now come with scythes to mow
The little crosses, row by row.
The poppies wonder why the men

In Flanders, at the wind's footfall,
The crosses do not bend at all,
As wheat and barley used to do
Whenever wind went running through.
The poppies wonder when they see
The crosses stand so rigidly!

O God, to whom all men must bring
What they have done, for reckoning,
At harvest time what byre or bin
Have you to put these crosses in?—
What word, for men who marched to sow
Not wheat, but crosses, row by row?

Alas! Our tears can never bring
The men who came here harvesting
And come no more! We do not know
Their songs all still! But crosses stand
Row after row in Flanders land!

GERMAN CHARACTER IN PATRIOTIC SONGS.

The Kind of People We Have to Deal With Shown in These Expressions of National Temper.

By GEORGE H. MCKNIGHT,
Department of English, Ohio State University.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The inability of the German mind to comprehend the motives of other nations has been the subject of frequent remark of late, most recently in an editorial article of THE TIMES. Is this inability peculiar to German people? Is it not at least equaled by American inability to understand the state of mind of the German people? Blame for the war has been laid at the door of the German Government. But one should remember that the German Government from the start has been supported by the German people with almost fanatical devotion. Are the German people all that we are disposed to assume them to be? Has President Wilson real ground for optimism in hoping to enlist the support of the German people against its autocratic Government? It is not well to be unduly pessimistic in this matter, but it is important for Americans to realize that the German people not only have economic interests at stake but that the whole purpose of the war, so incomprehensible from an American point of view, is quite in keeping with German ideals and German aspirations.

Mr. Gerard, in a recent installment of his serial publication, devotes a paragraph to an explanation of the German character. The explanation, which is none too subtle, he finds in the quality and the amount of the foods consumed by the Germans. Meat-eating peoples, he points out, prevail over vegetarians, although whom he has in mind as vegetarians he neglects to indicate. The true key to an understanding of German character is hardly to be found in the nature and amount of German food, but rather in the nature of the ideals upon which Germans are nourished.

That German ideals are not American ideals is evident in the patriotic songs of the two peoples. Apropos of the community singing in the stadium of City College in New York, a well-known American singer, quoted in THE TIMES of Aug. 20, remarks: "One can but notice the difference in the German and American spirits as emphasized by these two crowds" (the American chorus and a similar chorus in Berlin.) She proceeds to draw a contrast between the American songs, such as "Love's Lullaby" and "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River" and the German songs, "every one of which carried the boast of Germany's prowess and the threat of destruction to the enemies of the Fatherland." An acquaintance with the ritual of song which forms so important a feature of German festal gatherings aids greatly in arriving at an understanding of the German spirit. The official kommersbuch, which on convivial occasions serves a use like that of the hymn book in church service, is known through the length and breadth of Germany. Its contents include hundreds of songs of great variety, formal drinking songs, homely folk-songs, songs celebrating the joys, the frolics of student life, or lamenting the departure of carefree days. But among these songs no note is so dominant as the patriotic. Amid the perfervid enthusiasm of the kommers the participant voices his love of Fatherland and his aspirations for its future. Many of these songs express the old Germanic virtues, love of honor, truth, freedom. But there is another distinct note, that of exultation in victory, the sense of Germany's destiny. "Deutschland über Alles" is but the best known of many songs by which national feeling is kept at fever heat not only by the extravagance of the sentiment expressed, but by the vehement force which characterizes the singing. "Hail to thee, thou land so great and holy, before all others in this round globe" forms one refrain. A superreligious ecstasy finds expression in the words. "O Fatherland, how strong and gentle, how majestic dost thou stand there! thou image of God, high and fair, hail to thee, Germania; like the thunder of the waves our oath ascends to heaven; we stand as one man for Kaiser and kingdom." Americans who wish to comprehend the German spirit will do well to put these extravagant words beside those of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

What is the source of this peculiarly German quality of thought and feeling? Is it something new, peculiarly modern? Quite the contrary. Racial traits are remarkably permanent. In the quality of German patriotic song and in the quality of German word and German deed in the course of the war is to be recognized a quality which pervades German literature of the earliest period. The "iron hand" laid on Belgium has its parallel in early Teutonic story. Alboin, the Lombard King, looking over the lovely plains of Northern Italy, exclaims: "Thou garden of God, henceforth thou shalt be a German land! If thou dost not grant me a willing peace, I will weld about my brow for my crown an iron band." Heroic independence of fate is common to early Teutonic spirit and to the modern German philosophy. "Fate," says the Teutonic Beowulf, "often saves a man if his courage suffices." "Whoever objects against fate ought better to object against himself. A firm will commands fate," says General von Ludendorff.

The essentially Germanic quality of the German spirit has in recent times become more accentuated on account of the discarding of the ideals of chivalry by the German. Chivalry, never indigenous to German soil, did not take deep root there, and has in recent times been more and more supplanted by ideals that are genuinely Germanic, echt deutsch. German thought has revolted more and more from what it regards as the forced virtues of chivalry, which it brands as romantic or sentimental. "The only sane basis of a great State," says Bismarck, "is a healthy egoism, not romanticism."

Christianity itself has of late been overwhelmed by the wave of genuinely Germanic. Heine represents the old gods upon the advent of Christianity as retiring underground. Mr. Zangwill has recently quoted from Heine the prophetic words in which he "figured the German philosopher evoking the demoniac energies of old pantheism, wakening the ancient Teutonic battle madness and rousing Thor from his thousand-year sleep to shatter the Gothic cathedrals with his giant hammer, and to send the old German thunder—der deutsche Donner—crashing as naught ever crashed before in the history of the world." Remarkably prophetic words! The Germanic Thor is once more the god of the Germans. Listen to the words of the poet Felix Dahn, "Since then it is the joyous German right, land to win with the hammer. We are of the Hammer-god's race and mean to inherit his world empire."

Chivalrous virtues have been frankly discarded for virtues (?) more genuinely German. The Christian God has been dethroned by the Germanic Thor. Racial traits have reasserted themselves, and the German reverts to the spirit of the Germanic pagan past.

How is one to explain the preservation of the pure Teutonic strain in Germany? Teutonic races outside of Germany, and, to a certain extent, Scandinavia, have for the most part become separated from their racial traditions. The descendants of the Vandals, the Goths, the Lombards, the Franks have preserved little that will serve to connect them with their Teutonic origins. The Anglo-Saxons also have absorbed so many foreign elements as to make it difficult in their descendants to detect the purely Germanic strain. Not so the Germans. Various are the means by which they have kept awake the old spirit. Teutonic antiquities has been a subject of study pursued with fervor in German universities. Not only the song of Hildebrand and the song of the Niebelungs have been intensively studied, but Anglo-Saxon poems, Scandinavian sagas, and Latin histories have been searched for light on the Teutonic past. Nor has this Germanic love remained the exclusive property of scholars. The old stories, garnered from various sources, have been retold by German poets in versions which are said to "exert an indescribable magic on the spirits of German youth," and gathered into collections intended to "sow the seed of love of the Fatherland." "To us Germans," says the poet, "there comes from these old tales comfort and hope. So long as we hold fast to these with faith, no enemy's hand may reach to our fair fields. As an inheritance remains to us the treasure of our old poetry."

The spirit of the Teutonic past is kept alive in Germany not only in these jealously guarded memories, but in the products of the German artists who draw their inspiration from the same racial sources. The Swiss painter Böcklin, whose popularity in Germany is hardly more remarkable than his failure to win general popularity elsewhere, suits German taste because he expresses German feelings, feelings that in earlier times created belief in dwarfs and elves and nixies. Wagner, too, in story material, in verse form, in symbolic meaning, and, more than all, perhaps, in his music, expresses a spirit that is German. His music, says Mr. Zangwill, "sends the old racial memories vibrating through his fellow-Teuton's soul, deep calling unto deep." Modern German philosophy also unfolds ideas already implicit in early Germanic literature. In Hagen of the Niebelungen Lied may we not see embodied many of the elements of Nietzsche's philosophy?

Much of all this sounds strange to the American ear. Here there is little to do with American ideals of freedom and equality, with the American virtues of love and service. Is it not evident that the American is as far from understanding the German people as the German is from understanding the American people? In forming our judgment of what may be expected from the German people, we must not forget that the character of a people is largely determined by the ideals upon which it is nourished and that German racial ideals are not American ideals.

WHY STUDY GERMAN?

Its Usefulness Held to Have Increased with the War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The mistaken patriotism which is trying to eliminate the German language and literature from our schools is, to say the least, short-sighted. It is another outcropping of our national fault of self-sufficiency which when detected in other nationalities we call provincialism. Its exponents, whether they know it or not, are in the same category with those who still believe that we are foolishly mixing in a European brawl that is no business of ours. It is time such people waked up to the fact that we are now and henceforth shall be next-door neighbors to all Europe.

Lest I be misunderstood let me say right here that I am not pro-German. My interest in this matter is not therefore that of a German propagandist, but is a purely scientific one. For that matter, I can't see that the present world crisis should have anything to do with language study except to enhance the value of the study of all foreign languages. America has lagged behind in acquiring the ability to talk with the foreigner in his own tongue. If that foreigner is our enemy, all the more reason why we should not lose the advantage of reading his dispatches and diaries, interrogating prisoners at the front, eavesdropping at sap ends, &c., without the need of an interpreter. It would be an unquestionable gain if every soldier in the Entente trenches understood German. Germany has profited by having a large per cent. of her men conversant with French and English.

But viewed from any angle the reasons are equally cogent. To discard the knowledge of a foreign language is to throw away the key to a great storehouse. It was Basil Gildersleeve, I believe, who was wont to say that a knowledge of German is to the scholar what clean linen is to the gentleman—no particular honor to have it but a disgrace to be without it. If this was true before the war—and allowing for the extravagance of the epigram, it was—it will be doubly so from now on, for the war has not arrested thought but stimulated it. However, no appeal need be made to the scientist and scholar. He knows that if German ceased to be spoken it would still be worth while to learn the dead language. It is to the uninitiated, who are hesitating as to the utility of German for any purpose, that I would like to point out the following:

The German people is one of the most important industrially in the world. They reached this prominence in a remarkably short time and in the face of keen competition. The war, while crippling their resources, has but developed a greater ability to combat difficulties and solve knotty problems. Is it probable that any outcome of the war will keep them out of the world's commerce for long? If the Entente should boycott them, there is every evidence that the United States will not, hence the commercial relations of the two countries will be livelier than ever.

Or again, is it probable that a country of more than 60,000,000 inhabitants, situated as favorably in the midst of Europe as Germany is, the heir of great musical, literary, and artistic traditions, will cease to count in the world's civilization?

The dropping of German in the schools will doubtless be more or less common here and there over the country. The students will suffer in the long run, not Germany. Is it not a pity that these well meaning but foolish patriots can't apply their zeal more sensibly and efficiently toward the winning of the war?

SENATE WILL PASS WAR TAX BILL TODAY

A LAW WITHIN TWO WEEKS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—A final vote on the $2,500,000,000 War Revenue bill, which has been before Congress since May 25, will be taken tomorrow by the Senate under the general consent agreement made ten days ago. Senator SIMMONS, Chairman of the Finance Committee, sponsor for the measure, anticipates that the bill will be passed by an overwhelming majority.

As the lineup of the Senate appeared tonight, it is regarded as likely that fewer than ten Senators will vote against the measure. The opposition, which two weeks ago threatened the defeat of the bill, has melted away because of the concessions made by the Finance Committee in heavy increases upon income taxes and excess war profits.

The Senate will vote tomorrow first on the proposed tax on coffee, sugar, and tea, which in the bill embraces an aggregate levy of $86,000,000. Senator LA FOLLETTE and other radicals will fight to throw out this entire levy. If successful, the aggregate yield of the bill would be cut down to $2,414,000,000. But Senate leaders backing the measure on both sides of the chamber asserted tonight that there appeared to be not the slightest chance of these taxes being thrown out.

Another fight is to come tomorrow in an effort to eliminate the McKellar amendment, tentatively adopted last week by the Senate, to establish a zone system for second-class mail matter, running from 1 cent to 3 cents a pound. This, if passed by the Senate, would yield approximately $15,000,000.

The Senate is to start to vote at 4 o'clock, and it is expected that it will take less than half an hour to dispose of the bill. After its passage the bill will go to joint conference of House and Senate, where the changes made from the measure as originally passed by the House will be taken up.

The original House bill has been vastly altered by the Senate, the chief changes being in the excess war profits and income taxes. The House war profits tax—which is now called the excess profits tax in the bill as amended—provided for an aggregate levy of only $350,000,000. This has been increased to $1,060,000,000. The House income tax was approximately $225,000,000, while the Senate has raised this to $842,000,000.

When the House adopted its war profits tax, there was bitter opposition in that body against fixing such a low levy. Sentiment on both sides of the House is said to be overwhelmingly in favor of the drastic increase made in the Senate. This attitude also is said to prevail respecting the income tax increases, so that these two features are expected to be adopted by the House. Senate leaders believed tonight that the bill would be in the hands of the President within two weeks.

Senator Colt of Rhode Island in a speech on the bill yesterday said:

"I wish to state briefly why I am opposed to any higher taxation than is imposed by the pending bill, known as the Finance Committee's substitute. I think this bill goes to the very limit of safety.

"Revenue is raised by taxes and bonds, and the important question here presented is: What percentage of the revenue required should be raised by taxes and what percentage by bonds? This is a fundamental question, because it underlies the business prosperity of the country and the credit of the Government. It may be conceded that it is better to pay as you go, but the question still remains, How far can you pay as you go without an industrial collapse and without impairing the credit of the Government?

"The war may last several years longer, and we may have to resort to increased taxation next year. How can we do this if our industries are crippled and business depressed by too heavy taxes levied this year? The sums raised to carry on this war are of such magnitude that other wars afford a very imperfect guide in the solution of this taxation problem. The best and safest guide which we now have is the experience of England, France and Germany during the last three years, and our country may well profit by their experience. These nations have levied the highest direct taxation which they believed to be safe. In other words, they have solved the problem of determining the amount of revenue which can be raised by taxation without unduly disturbing the business of the country or the credit of the Government.

"We propose in the first year of the war to raise by direct taxation 9 per cent. more than England during the third year of the war, 21 per cent. more than France or Germany, and 27 per cent. more than Canada. In the management of revenue and finance no nation ranks higher than England, and it might therefore be seriously contended that it would not be prudent for this country to exceed her rate of 26 per cent. But, however this may be, it certainly cannot be said, in view of the experience of England, France and Germany, that it would be safe for this country to increase the percentage of taxation beyond 33-1-3 per cent.

"No one can predict the effect which the pending bill will have upon the business of the country. Judging from the experience of England, France, and Germany, who have gone to the limit of taxation, the high taxation imposed by the pending bill may cause a marked disturbance in the general business of the country. Under these circumstances we certainly should not increase this danger by imposing additional taxes. Let us not jeopardize the nation's financial standing in this hour of peril by excessive taxes."

LOOK AHEAD TO ADJOURNMENT

WORK IN FRANCE WIDENS

Plan to Combat Tuberculosis Peril—Nearly $12,500,000 Appropriated for Work in the Allied Countries.

Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross, issued yesteray a report "to the American people concerning the activities of the American Red Cross in Europe since war with Germany was declared." The report is an official summary of a more complete report which will be issued at an early date. The report shows that since May 10, last, the day on which the President created the War Council of the Red Cross, the American organization has appropriated for its work in the countries of the Allies the sum of $12,339,681, this figure including all appropriation up to Aug 31.

"The policy of the Red Cross War Council," the announcement says, "is to report frequently to the American people concerning the use which is being made of all Red Cross money."

The general objects of the Red Cross work in France are described as follows:

1. To establishe and maintain hospitals for soldiers in the American Army in France.
2. To establish and maintain canteens, rest houses, recreation huts and other means of supplying the American soldiers with such comforts and recreation as the army authorities may approve.
3. To establish and maintain in France canteens, rest houses, recreation huts and other means of supplying comforts and recreation for the soldiers in the armies of our allies.
4. To distribute hospital equipment and supplies of all kinds to military hospitals for soldiers of the American or allied armies.
5. To engage in civilian relief, including:
(a) The care and education of destitute children.
(b) Care of mutilated soldiers.
(c) Care of sick and disabled soldiers.
(d) Relief work in the devastated areas of France and Belgium by such as furnishing to the inhabitants of these districts agricultural implements, household goods, foods, clothing, and such temporary shelter as will enable them to return to their homes.
(e) To provide relief for and guard against the increase of tuberculosis.
6. To furnish relief for soldiers and civilians held as prisoners by the enemy and to give assistance to such civilians as are returned to France from time to time from the parts of Belgium and France held by the enemy.
7. To supply financial assistance to committees, societies or individuals allied with the American Red Cross and carrying on relief work in Europe.

The War Council has sent to Europe five separate commissions, each composed of representative American citizens, skilled in medical and surgical work, business administration, and in other lines of Red Cross effort. The work and policy of the Red Cross will be determined and guided, Mr. Davison says, by the first hand inquiries and the considered judgment of the members of these commissions.

The report, continuing, says that "by reason of the crucial importance of the work in France" a Red Cross Commission to that country was dispatched as soon as it could be organized after the appointment of the War Council. This commission, at the head of which is Major Grayson. M. P. Murphy, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, has general supervision over the work of the American Red Cross in Europe, and its membership is composed of fourteen leading experts in special lines of work. Each of the other commissions has been selected along similar lines, and the work of all these commissions is either volunteer or is paid by private contributions.

"The effort," the report adds, "has been in accordance with the expressed views of the President of the United States and of the civil and military authorities of France to co-ordinate along helpful lines all relief work being done in France and America."

Concerning the scope of the Red Cross work in behalf of the United States Army the report says:

Scope of Red Cross Efforts.

"The first and supreme object of American Red Cross care is our own army and navy. The American Army in France is received in large reception camps on the coast, and after several weeks of preliminary training the men are sent across the country to permanent training camps back of the firing lines. Along the route followed by the troops the Red Cross has established infirmaries and rest stations, each in charge of an American trained nurse with an American man to assist her.

"Additional infirmaries and rest stations will be established in the near future, and adequate buildings are also being erected wherever needed.

"Canteens are being established by the Red Cross at railway stations where American soldiers on reserve duty or on leave, and those returning to or from duty, may find rest and refreshment. Baths, food, games, and other comforts will be made available at these canteens.

"When the American troops start for France the men are given comfort kits. Christmas parcels will be sent over later.

"The War Council has appropriated $100,000 for medical research work in France.

"To be able to do its work without delay, the Red Cross is establishing warehouses at different points of importance in the French theatre of war. An appropriation of $500,000 has been voted to establish this service and provide its first stock of supplies.

"In response to a cable from the commission in France, the War Council appropriated $1,500,000 to purchase foodstuff to be sent to France.

"It has also appropriated $1,000,000 for the purchase of supplies in France; all for use in the hospital supply service.

"Near the firing line the Red Cross is establishing field canteens. Extending the work already begun by the French Red Cross, it will provide one of these canteens for every corps of the French Army, and as well later for the American Army.

"To carry out these plans the War Council has made appropriations of about $700,000 which will establish the canteens and maintain them for about three months. Much of the equipment will be supplied by the French Army.

"A Red Cross transportation service, through the co-operation of the French, British, and Italian Govenments, the United States Shipping Board, and the leading steamship and railroad companies, has been established to handle the vast quantities of medical and relief supplies now being shipped almost daily to France, Belgium, Serbia, Russia, and other belligerent countries.

"The Red Cross will have cargo space on every steamer chartered by the United States Shipping Board. Army transports also will carry Red Cross supplies."

"In advance of the fighting forces the United States sent to the European battlefields six base hospitals organized during the last year by the Red Cross—the first United States army organization sent to Europe. These were sent at the request of the British Commission.

"More than a dozen base hospitals organized by the American Red Cross are now seeing active service in France, and others are rapidly being made ready for foreign service. Each of these base hospitals has a staff of 22 physicians, two dentists, 65 Red Cross nurses, and 150 enlisted men of the Army Medical Corps. Before war was declared, twenty-six of these units had been formed and 47 are now ready for service. It costs at least $75,000 to equip a base hospital with beds, blankets, sterilizers, operating tables, tents, dental outfits, automobiles, and kitchens."

500,000 White Plague Victims.

One of the most important undertakings of the Red Cross in France is to combat the tuberculosis peril. The report says that at the present time 500,000 persons are afflicted with tuberculosis as a direct result of the war, and that "scientific efforts to control the spread of the malady are not only of supreme concern to France herself but they are of great importance in making France healthy for our own troops." All work is being done under the general administration of the French Government and by French people.

For the relief of wounded and sick French soldiers and their families the American Red Cross has appropriated $1,000,000, and the organization has made plans to take care temporarily of the hundreds of thousands of destitute refugees in France. The report cites the French Ministry of the Interior as authority for the statement that these refugees number about 400,000, but adds that "there is reason to think that the number is much larger."

Budget of Expenditures.

"The budget for expenditures in France to cover the period until Nov. 1, 1917, prepared by J. H. Perkins, Director of the Department of Military Affairs, Red Cross Commission in France, is for a total expenditure of $1,773,250. This covers work for the United States Army, surgical dressings, equipment and operation of diet kitchens, canteens, American Red Cross Motor Ambulance service, hospital expenses, &c.

"The budget of the Department of Civilian Relief in France, prepared by Homer Folks, Director of the Red Cross Department of Civil Affairs in France, up to Nov. 1, 1917, calls for $2,190,353.

"The budget of the Department of Administration in Paris, prepared by Carl Taylor, Director of Administration, up to Nov. 1, 1917, calls for $115,700.

"The budget of the Planning Department, prepared by George B. Ford, Director, up to Nov. 1, 1917, calls for $5,880.

"General appropriations have also been made, amounting in all to $10,492,601. They cover hospital supplies, foodstuffs, transportation supplies and motors, building material, machinery, medical research, child welfare work, clothing, American Ambulance Hospital expenses, nurses, &c.

"Before appropriations are recommended by the French Commission they are carefully prepared by the Director of the particular department concerned. They are then considered by a Finance Committee, consisting of Major Murphy, Chairman; J. H. Perkins, H. P. Harjes, H. O. Beatty, Carl Taylor, Homer Folks, William Endicott, and Ralph Preston. Three of this committee constitute a quorum, and every appropriation reported must receive the consent of all present.

"Most of the work in charge, for the Red Cross, of the work in France are giving their own time and paying their own expenses. A special fund of $100,000 has also been privately contributed to meet expenses of members of the French Commission unable to pay their own way."

For Russia	$322,780.87
For Rumania	247,000.00
For Italy	210,000.00
For Serbia	222,500.00
For England	8,800.00
For Armenia	000,000.00
Other appropriations	36,000.00

In France	$10,692,601.00
Outside of France	1,647,080.87
Grand total	$12,339,681.87

Some of the European appropriations are to cover a full year, but the greater part, the report adds, will have been spent by November of this year.

OUR DOCTORS TO AID FRENCH CIVILIANS

CO-ORDINATED RELIEF PLANS

Major Murphy and Heads of Private Organizations Outline Work Under Army Control.

AMERICAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sept. 9.—As a part of the plan to give immediate help to France through the agency of the American Red Cross, arrangements are now being made to install American doctors in every village of appreciable size within the zone of the American Army. In most instances Red Cross nurses will also be distributed among such villages. It has been found in many cases that the only doctors living in a town or a village have been taken into the army, and, in numerous cases, killed in action.

The work is being done in connection with and under the direction of American Army surgeons, a number of whom will themselves become resident physicians. An effort will be made to better conditions among the French civil population in this way, and also to make certain that the American zone is kept in the best possible sanitary condition.

There has been necessarily much neglect in the villages where only old women and children have been left to care for the affairs of the community, every able-bodied man having been called into the army or into some branch of the national service. The task of making good the deficit thus caused is a big one, but the American medical services are well equipped to take care of it, and the Red Cross has promised every possible aid in the way of supplies, doctors, and nurses.

Plans Co-ordination of Relief.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Difficulties which confront relief work in France and the advantages of co-ordination of effort by all the agencies engaged are outlined in a joint statement issued here by Major Grayson L. P. Murphy, Red Cross Commissioner for Europe, and a number of prominent American men and women who have been conducting private relief organizations of their own.

Among the signers are Mrs. Edith Wharton, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tuck, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Joseph A. Blake, Mrs. E. W. Shurtleff, Walter V. R. Berry, Mrs. C. K. Austin, John Gardner Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin G. Lathrop, Mrs. R. W. Bliss, Miss Anna Murray Vail, Mrs. Charles R. Scott, and Mrs. Philip P. Berard. Signing with Major Murphy for the Red Cross were James H. Perkins, Homer Folks, William Endicott, Winslow S. Pierce, and Carl Taylor.

The statement begins with a warm tribute to the wonderful work done in France and Belgium by private initiative and private organizations, but points out that America's entry into the war has greatly altered the situation. This work, it continued, has been both necessary and well done, and no new organization entering the field has the right to take any action to diminish the credit due. It must be recognized, however, that certain difficulties have arisen requiring new machinery, and "only by pooling interests can we accomplish necessary results."

The statement then recites the difficulties confronting all relief work as the fourth winter of the war approaches, mentioning more specifically ocean and land transportation.

Difficulties of Transportation.

"Even before the entrance of the United States into the war," it says, "the tonnage available was not sufficient adequately to meet the situation, and the strain put upon that transportation has been enormously increased by the coming of the United States army to France. This, in fact, is the great central factor which compels the new plans, and the controlling element in these plans is and must be the United States Army.

"The army will apportion the available tonnage and railroad transportation as it deems it wise, and in view of this fact it obviously is impossible for the army administration to undertake to deal with the great number of individual relief organizations. It has chosen, and the people of the United States have been requested to consider, the American Red Cross as the central organization through which relief work should be carried on by Americans in this war."

The statement then points out that the United States Army has also recognized the Y. M. C. A. as an essential factor in relief work, and the Red Cross, therefore, are, properly speaking, Governmental organizations, the statement says, and adds:

"Therefore it has seemed wise to us that the Red Cross should not attempt to use the limited transportation facilities at its command for distribution to points which are determined in America of a large number of individual contributions, but that it should receive contributions from all those individuals and societies in America that are willing to trust their contributions to its care, and that it should distribute them in such places as seem best to it and its associated charities in France and to such places as the distribution facilities at its command make possible. The Red Cross also wishes to make the announcement that it in no way wishes to limit or interfere with the space or facilities which others are able to procure, but that it wishes only to use those facilities which it is able to obtain in the way which its officers believe will best enable the society to carry out the duties with which it has been intrusted and which will best fit in with the needs of our army and will best carry out the desire we all have in our hearts to do the greatest good in the best way.

To Standardise Supplies.

"In order to do these things, we believe that the best way is: First, for the Red Cross here, aided by experienced relief societies, to classify, standardize, and requisition in the order of their importance relief supplies which are needed here, and determine what may either be purchased on this side or dispensed with altogether in order to save transportation space and at the same time fill the most pressing wants; and, secondly, for the Red Cross at home, aided by experienced societies and relief organizations in America, to provide in a systematic way for furnishing the relief supplies so indicated as needed here and which may not be purchased here and for their shipment in the order of their urgency."

23 AMERICANS WIN WAR CROSS IN A WEEK

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Twenty-three American Ambulance men have been decorated by the French Government with the War Cross during the last week for their work in the recent heavy fighting. They are:

Robert J. Flynn, San Anselmo, Cal.; Jehne Hann, Detroit, Mich.; Roy Stockwell, New Bedford, Mass.; Russell Tahley, Springfield, Mass.; James M. White, New York City; Richard M. Atwater, Scarsdale, N. Y.; William B. Gilmore, Chambersburg, Penn.; Ewen MacIntyre, Brighton, Mass.; C. Oswald Chew, Philadelphia; William Dock, St. Louis, Mo.; Lansing M. Payne, Durham, N. C.; Robert S. Paradise, Gerard's Cross, England; C. E. Frazier Clark, Detroit, Mich.; David Van Alstyne, Jr., Williamstown, Mass.; Harmon B. Craig, New York City; Berkeley Wheeler, Concord, Mass.; Theodore Miles, Mount Carroll, Ill.; Lars Potters, Buffalo; Lloyd S. Celter, Brunswick, Me.; William Anderson, Evanston, Ill.; R. H. Bryant Bowie, Philadelphia; William Agar, New York City; Joseph P. Kayes, Concord, Mass.

The orders recite the bravery of the ambulance men under fire on various occasions, recording here and there the destruction of their ambulances and reforting gas attacks through which they worked. The citation of Harmon B. Craig, who died in July, having been wounded by a bursting shell, says:

"He was a very conscientious and cool conductor, who under all circumstances, while under the enemy artillery fire, gave proofs of his devotion and his disdain of danger, and showed, notably on the 28th and 29th of June, the greatest energy in accomplishing his duty along a road that had been discovered and bombarded. He was mortally wounded on July 15 by a bursting shell in front of his post at a moment when he was attending to the removal of wounded under a most violent fire."

Harmon B. Craig was a Harvard student and a member of the American Field Service Corps. A high explosive shell tore off his leg below the knee, and he died in a hospital. Craig's parents are John Craig, manager of a Boston theatre, and Mrs. Craig, well known on the stage as Mary Young.

AMERICAN AIRMEN BUSY.

Have Downed Eight German Machines in Three Weeks.

By The Associated Press.

FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, Sept. 9.—American aviators with the French Army are making an admirable record, having brought down eight German machines within three weeks.

Walter Rhone of Martha's Vineyard, Mass., brought down his second enemy machine on Sept. 6 after a thrilling fight at an altitude of several thousand feet. A. Dundelach of Chicago destroyed his first German machine three days ago. Both men are in the French flying corps.

Paris friends of Everett Buckley, an American aviator, who had been reported killed, say that the report is not true, as he has been heard from within two or three days.

QUEEN ELIZABETH FLIES OVER GERMAN LINES

Escorted by Fighting Airplanes, She Views Occupied Belgian Territory.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Queen Elizabeth of Belgium recently made an airplane trip over a section of Belgian territory under German control. With King Albert she was visiting the front in Flanders held by the French troops, and in the course of her stay went to an aviation centre, where for some time she watched the expert airmen perform various feats.

The Queen then expressed a wish to obtain a glimpse once more of some of the regions of her unfortunate country still in hostile hands. Her wish was gratified, as she was taken on board an airplane which, with an escort of pursuit airplanes, flew over the enemy lines and above some villages occupied by the Germans.

Witherell-Bradley.

Mrs. Katherine Peck Bradley, daughter of T. D. Peck of Warrenton, N. C., and Lieutenant William Richmond Witherell, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Witherell of North Adams, Mass., were married on Saturday at the Hotel Manhattan. The wedding was hastened as Lieutenant Witherell has been ordered to duty.

SCHOOLS OPEN TODAY TO 844,191 PUPILS

GARY SYSTEM IS EXTENDED

Physical Training Law Goes Into Effect and School Day May Be Increased by 40 Minutes.

The public schools of this city reopen today. The registration of pupils took place last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. On Wednesday next principals will begin to send in figures as to attendance to the City Superintendent. These will be compiled and made public on Sept. 17.

It is estimated that the increase of pupils over the number in September of last year will be about 15,000. There has been no immigration to speak of in the last twelve months, and it is believed that the increase will not exceed the number given. Last September's figures were as follows: Elementary schools, 752,208; high schools, 72,611; trade and training schools, 1,945; vocational schools, 2,108; truant schools, 329—a total of 829,191. Adding 15,000 new pupils will make the attendance this year 844,191.

Only one new school building will be opened. This will be No. 93, at Ridgewood Heights, Queens. There will be opened also a four-room annex to Public School 32, the Bronx, and a portable school of two rooms as annex to Public School 11, Richmond. New Public School 93 will have accommodations for 1,835 pupils, but if necessary, 500 more can be taken care of. Eighty-five per cent. of the school site will be used for playgrounds.

The part-time problem is about the same as it was last June, when 34,491 children were enabled to receive only partial attention. It is thought that the present number of these pupils will not largely exceed that of last June. The much-discussed Gary plan has not so far done away with part time. Twelve schools in the Bronx are now run on the Gary plan, and in the latter part of the last school term twelve more of these duplicate schools were opened in Brooklyn. There are, therefore, now twenty-four Gary or duplicate plan schools in the city.

This Fall other schools will be operated on this plan, and before the end of the school year it is expected that about fifty will be in operation. The only additional school building to be so used at the beginning of this term is No. 132, Manhattan and Metropolitan Avenues and Conselyea Street, Brooklyn, of which Emily C. Powers is the Principal. The number of its classes has been increased from forty-nine to fifty-six. As the classes consist of about forty pupils each, this increase will give accommodations to about 300 more children.

In the registration of pupils an effort has been made to relieve the Health Department from the congestion previously caused by the demands of parents for age certificates of children whom they wish to enter for the first time. Arrangements have been made whereby the child is registered at school and the record of birth is later verified by the Health Department on receipt of a certification from the Principal. Parents this year were not allowed to get age certificates from the Health Department.

The rule regarding entrance to the elementary schools is that children under six years of age will not be admitted to a grade higher than kindergarten and children under five will not be admitted to the kindergarten classes until all the other children have been accommodated.

The Welsh physical training law went into effect on Sept. 1. The Committee on Elementary Schools, in order to meet with its requirements, has made a report, which will be submitted to the Board of Education at its meeting on Wednesday, asking that the by-laws be amended so as to change the school day from five hours to five hours and forty minutes. The upper school grades will be principally affected by this new rule. The extension of time in the high schools was made last school term. It now consists of nine periods of forty-five minutes each.

One of the most important features of the present school year will be the attempt to teach English to all the immigrant population of the city. This work will be carried on in the evening schools under the supervision of District Superintendent Henry E. Jenkins. The Board of Education has appropriated $78,000 for this purpose. Mayor Mitchel has appointed a committee to co-operate in the plans. Dr. Stevenson is the Chairman and William Fellowes Morgan one of its members.

There is a very large number of persons in this city who do not speak English correctly. All past attempts to get them to attend the evening schools have failed. The present plan is to attract them by the special features of the school. The plan was partly in operation last school year and proved so successful as to attract the attention of educators in other large cities. Now that the $78,000 has been appropriated the work will be carried on to a much greater degree. These classes will be opened on the first Monday in October.

FIND J. H. MILLER'S BODY.

Lawyer, Missing Since Friday, Drowned Near Fort Wadsworth.

The body of John H. Miller, a member of the law firm of Cary, Miller & McEwen of 115 Broadway, was found yesterday on the shore near Fort Wadsworth by Private James Bale of the Sixth Coast Artillery command. Mr. Miller is said to have been melancholy since the death of his wife a year ago, and, according to his former secretary, Anthony P. Savarese of 208 Bridge Street, Brooklyn, recently suffered financial difficulties. Mr. Miller's body was removed to the City Farm Colony Morgue at New Dorp, S. I.

Later in the day Mr. Savarese and Josiah M. Le Count, who said he was Mr. Miller's first cousin, telephoned Coroner James Zaill of Rosebank, S. I., and told him they had identified the body. They both said Mr. Miller had disappeared from his temporary residence at 2,614 Broadway on last Friday.

Mr. Miller was born May 11, 1850, the son of Nicholas and Adele Le Count Adams of New Rochelle. After the death of his wife he had lived for a time with his sister in New Rochelle.

FIRES AT MOTOR BOAT NEAR BIG DRY DOCK

Sentry Wounds One Man in Mysterious Craft Speeding on South Brooklyn Waterfront.

Soldiers who were guarding a dry dock in South Brooklyn last night saw a motor boat cutting across the entrance of the dock at great speed, and, after giving it three challenges, fired several shots at it. Apparently the bullets disabled the boat, for the craft stopped, and other boats that put out to it found that one of four men had been struck in the abdomen by one of the bullets.

In the preliminary investigation by the officers of the guard no facts could be obtained from the men in the boat as to why they were cruising near the dock, with Government ships near by, at midnight with their craft under great speed. Reports were sent to the police and to the Federal authorities, and the men put under several hours' questioning.

One of the sentries heard the noise of the motor as the boat approached, and when he saw the craft as it went through a streak of light he called for it to halt. When the men failed to stop the motor after a third challenge the sentry opened fire. The entire guard was called out to aid in catching the boat.

$200,000 MANTEGNA PANEL ARRIVES SAFELY

The famous panel of "Judith with the Head of Holofernes," by Andrea Mantegna, and popularly known as the Pembroke Mantegna because it was in the collection of the Earl of Pembroke, has arrived in America. This picture, purchased by the Duveens in London, was valued at $200,000, a record figure, for it measures only twelve inches in height by seven in width.

Mantegnas are rare, and according to authorities not more than thirty-five genuine examples of the master of the Paduan school (1431-1506) are known. There are three other Mantegnas in America: "The Adoration of the Magi," in the John G. Johnson collection, Philadelphia; "Madonna and Child," in the Altman collection, and a "Madonna and Child" in Mrs. Jack Gardner's collection, Boston.

The Mantegna in the Altman collection was purchased from François Kleinberger for $147,500 at the sale of the Weber collection in Hamburg in 1912. The "Judith" was given by King Charles I. to Philip, fourth Earl of Pembroke, in exchange for a Parmigian and Bellini portrait.

SAYS GERMANS MUST KILL STOCK THIS FALL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 9.—Herr von Waldow, the new German Imperial Food Controller, in the communication he has given the press commission of the Reichstag regarding the food prospects for the coming year, does not express very optimistic views, although he says he is sure Germany can hold out.

He says that cereal crops and peas, beans, &c., will have a moderate yield of medium quality and quantity, whereas the potato crop will be satisfactory unless exceptional weather spoils present prospects. This contrast indicates that Herr von Waldow considers the cereal crop considerably less than satisfactory.

Fodder, he says, is going to be a serious difficulty. After supplying army requirements and providing for the maintenance of breeding stock, there will be little for keeping cattle going, and there will be very little for fattening pigs. Hence, before Winter Gemany must kill off her pigs and horned cattle, with the result that a more plentiful supply of meat in the Autumn will be followed by an increased shortage later.

He holds out little hope that the population can be supplied with milk and butter through the Winter, but he says that on the whole, Germans have the right to expect that they will be able to come through.

WILSON AT GLOUCESTER TAKES A MOTOR DRIVE

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 9.—President and Mrs. Wilson made an unexpected call at this port today on board the Presidential yacht Mayflower, motored along the North Shore for two hours with Colonel and Mrs. E. M. House, and tonight dined on board the yacht with them as guests. Colonel House, who has a Summer home at Coolidge Point, Magnolia, assured all inquirers that the visit of the President was purely social and had no connection with any international question.

Three automobiles were in readiness at the public landing, where Colonel and Mrs. House greeted the President and his wife, two of the cars belonging to Colonel House and the other to a Boston business man. After chatting on the wharf for a few minutes, President and Mrs. Wilson got into one car, Colonel and Mrs. House entered the second machine, and the three Secret Service men who came ashore with the President took the third. The party went through the main streets of the city almost unrecognized, while the few persons who did catch a glimpse of the President's features were so surprised that there was almost no demonstration.

The three cars disappeared to the southwest along the North Shore Boulevard and were gone for two hours. When they returned they found the landing where the launch was tied up still deserted except for the caretaker. The President and Mrs. Wilson at once boarded the launch and were taken out to the Mayflower. The launch promptly put back to the landing for Colonel and Mrs. House, who said that they were going to dine with the President.

BUILDING MATERIAL DEALERS TO MEET

LENDING INTERESTS INVITED

Slump in Construction Work Since Declaration of War to be Discussed and Investigated.

Marcus M. Marks, President of the Borough of Manhattan, has set aside Thursday afternoon, Sept. 20, at 3 o'clock, on the twentieth floor of the Municipal Building, as the time and the place for the mass meeting that has been called under the auspices of the Building Material Exchange of New York to discover whether there is any fixed reason why building construction should not be permitted to proceed during war time, says The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

This date was fixed following a conference held at the close of the week in the Building Material Exchange at which many of the leading representatives of the building material manufacturers, dealers, and of the Building Trades Employers Association were present and discussed some of the primary hindrances affecting construction. Among the speakers were Alfred Ludwig, Superintendent of Buildings of Manhattan; F. E. Conover of the Building Trades Employers' Association, former Commissioner of Docks Calvin Tomkins; Frederick Rose of the Greater New York Brick Company, Frank S. Hanley, Secretary of the Eastern Supply Association; F. N. Sprole, representing the National Fireproofing Company; Mr. McMann of McMann & Taylor, representing the pipe and valve interests; Mr. Fredenberg of Fredenberg & Lounsbury, representing front brick and cement interests, and Arthur Pendleton, representing the National Terra Cotta Society.

Standing out pre-eminently as causes of the timidity of building money at this time were the three facts that there seemed to be a general impression that building material prices were bound to drop to lower levels, that contractors would soon be able to obtain more reliable delivery dates and the uncertainty of cost of labor.

Offsetting these conditions facts were brought out to show that the city is under-constructed, therefore establishing a demand for new construction work, that the best forms of paper security in Wall Street had recently been showing weakness, and that building material prices, probably for a long time would not drop below present levels, although it is not probable that these levels will run to much higher plishes.

Finally, it was generally conceded that a greater part of the current hesitancy was due to the inability of contractors to obtain definite delivery dates for structural steel. There was an impression, however, that once the Government fixed the price, a much greater capacity would be made available for building construction than has heretofore seemed possible.

Assurances were given that a notable steel official would be present at the mass meeting, as by that time, it was said, there was a possibility that the present tenseness in the metal market would be relieved.

A survey of current building material lists for the week shows few indications of any price weakening. Hudson common brick closed a little below the level quoted seven days ago, but the present price of $8 to $8.25 is in response to manufacturers' insistency to sell. Raritan common brick is being held firmly at $8.50 to $9 on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

As for the quantity of Hudson brick available, the count up the river has not been completed, but early estimates show that there will be more brick on hand than last year at closing time, despite the short-handed conditions at the kilns and the light demand here.

This condition is due to the fact that scarcity of labor prevented generous shipments of new brick, and there is a large quantity of new brick in kilns that has not yet been burned. Last year the Hudson kilns closed with 400,000,000 brick. This year's count will show the reserves to be nearer 500,000,000.

Portland cement prices will not go below present levels, according to the most dependable trade advices.

The present level is $2.12 in 1,000-barrel lots, and this department is taking the lead among building materials in protecting the contractor for the life of the job he orders on. This policy of protecting the contractor on his prices during the life of the operation is one that the mass meeting will attempt to extend to other lines, especially to structural steel.

Steel beams in New York are reported at 4.445 cents a pound instead of 4.695 cents last week and 4.669 cents on Aug. 8. Steel bars are now quoted at 4.195 cents instead of 4.695 a week ago and 4.669 on Aug. 8. Lake copper is quoted at 25.25 cents instead of 25.50, and electrolytic, New York, shows a similar decline of the cent at St. Louis and New York. Lead is reported at 10.25 cents instead of 10.55 here, and tin has fallen off half a cent. Tin plate, Pittsburgh, has advanced a dollar a box and is now quoted at $12.

The general basic building material market is following the lead of steel in the belief that steel requirements for war purposes cannot possibly absorb the entire capacity of the country's mills and that deliveries for building construction will be more dependable in the not distant future.

ROOSEVELT DEMANDS RACE-FUSION HERE

With 38 Others He Issues Appeal to People of All Nationalities.

ONE FLAG, ONE LANGUAGE

Colonel Roosevelt issued a signed statement yesterday under the title of "The Children of the Crucible," setting forth patriotic reasons for united action by all Americans of whatever national ancestry in active support of the Government and the prosecution of the war. This message, which was made public at his home in Oyster Bay, bears the names of thirty-eight other persons, representing ancestry of the allied nations, of the neutral countries, and of Germany.

The name of Oscar S. Straus follows the signature of Colonel Roosevelt. The other names include George von L. Meyer, who was Secretary of the Navy during the Administration of Presidents Roosevelt and Taft; Michael I. Pupin, a professor at Columbia University; William Loeb, Jr., former Collector of the Port; Anthony Fiala, and John D. Crimmins.

The appeal cites the example of Washington and his men, "who did not hesitate because of the ties of blood to resist and antagonize Great Britain when Great Britain wronged this nation," as one for Americans to follow today. The statement goes on with the suggestion that, "The best way to accomplish this fusing of Americanism is through the activities of the Vigilantes, a non-partisan, militant, anti-pacifist group of writers, artists, and other patriotic Children of the Crucible." The statement in part reads:

"We Americans are the children of the crucible. It has been our boast that out of the crucible, the melting pot of life in this free land, all the men and women of all the nations who come hither emerge as Americans and as nothing else; Americans who proudly challenge as a right, not as a favor, that they 'belong' just exactly as much as any other Americans and that they stand on a full and complete equality with them; Americans, therefore, who must, even more strongly, insist that they have renounced completely and without reserve, all allegiance to the lands from which they or their forefathers came, and that it is a binding duty on every citizen of this country in every important crisis to act solidly with all his fellow Americans, having regard only to the honor and interest of America and treating every other nation purely on the conduct in the crisis, without reference to his ancestral predilections or antipathies.

Pacifists Like Tories.

"All Americans of other race origin must act toward the countries from which their ancestors severally sprang as Washington and his associates in their day acted. Otherwise they are traitors to America. This applies especially today to all Americans of German blood who directly or indirectly in any manner support Germany as against the United States and the Allies of the United States; it applies no less specifically to all American citizens of Irish blood who are led into following the same course not by their love of Germany but by their hatred of England. One motive is as inexcusable as the other, and in each case the action is treasonable to the United States.

"The professional pacifists have, during the last three years, proved themselves the evil enemies of their country. They now advocate an immediate peace, and in so doing they have shown themselves to be the spiritual heirs of the Tories who in the name of peace opposed Washington, and of the Copperheads who in the name of peace opposed Lincoln. We regard these men and women as traitors to the Republic; we regard them as traitors to the great cause of justice and humanity.

"This war is a war for the vital interests of America. When we fight for America abroad we save our children from fighting American armies home beside their own ruined hearthstones. We believe that the large majority of Americans are proudly ready to fight to the last for the overthrow of the brutal German militarism which threatens America no less than every other civilized nation.

"We hold that the true test of loyal Americanism today is effective service against Germany. We should exert as speedily as possible every particle of our vast lazy strength to win the triumph over Germany. Therefore, we should demand that the Government act at once with unrelenting severity against the traitors here at home, whether their treasonable activity take the form of editing and publishing newspapers, of uttering speeches, or of intrigue and conspiracy.

One Flag, One Language.

"We must have but one flag. We must also have but one language. That must be the language of the Declaration of Independence, of Washington's Farewell address, of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and second Inaugural. We cannot tolerate any attempt to oppose or supplant the language and culture that has come down to us from the builders of this Republic with the language and culture of any European country. The greatness of this nation depends on the swift assimilation of the aliens who welcomes to her shores. Any force which attempts to retard that assimilative process is a force hostile to the highest interests of our country. We call upon all loyal and unadulterated Americans to man the trenches against this enemy within our gates.

"We believe that they can most effectively do this through some organization. The Vigilantes, a non-partisan, militant, anti-pacifist group of writers, artists, and other patriotic children of the crucible who, from their headquarters in New York, have for months been conducting a vigorous pro-America campaign in the newspapers of the country, offer exactly such an organization.

"We ask that good Americans address themselves at once to The Vigilantes. We ask, moreover, that, whether through this organization, or independently, they uphold the hands of the Government at every point efficiently and resolutely against our foreign and domestic foes, and that they constantly spur the Government to speedier and more effective action.

"Of us who sign some are Protestants, some are Catholics, some are Jews. Most of us were born in this country of parents born in various countries of the old world—in Germany, France, England, Ireland, Italy, the Slavonic and the Scandinavian lands; some of us were born abroad; some of us are of revolutionary stock. All of us are Americans, and nothing but Americans."

UP-STATE SOLDIERS OBJECT TO CROWDS

The camps of the federalized New York National Guardsmen at Van Cortlandt and Pelham Bay Parks were crowded with visitors yesterday. Lieutenant William T. Crocker, chaplain of the Seventy-first Regiment, was the guest of the officers at luncheon, a celebration of his fifty-fifth birthday.

Mrs. James W. Lester, wife of Brig. Gen. Lester, came from her home at Saratoga to see her husband at his headquarters at Van Cortlandt Park. Members of his staff and civilian friends had decorated his tent with flowers in recognition of the fifty-eighth anniversary of his birth. General and Mrs. Lester have two sons in the army, a third son is at the officers' training camp at Plattsburg, and their fourth son, a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, is to enter the Medical Corps.

The men of the Second and Third Regiments of Infantry at Pelham Bay Park, which is a part of General Lester's brigade, have complained of too many visitors entering the company streets. The men are from up-State communities and know very few of the local visitors, and so have little personal interest in these uninvited guests. General Lester has issued an order making it optional with the regimental commanders regarding the admission of visitors.

A committee of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense will start a recruiting campaign in Brooklyn today in co-operation with the army recruiting forces, under direction of Lieutenant E. F. Thompson.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP MILLS, HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Sept. 9.—Three Western units arrived at Camp Mills today, which, together with three others now en route, will complete the formation of the Forty-second Division. The One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Regiment of Infantry of Ohio, which is at war strength; the One Hundred and Fiftieth Field Artillery of Indiana, and the Second Battalion of Field Artillery of Minnesota, which has been training at Fort Riley, Kansas, were the arrivals. The Ohio men are commanded by Colonel Benson Hough. The Color Sergeant of the regiment is Hank Dowdy, a former member of the Boston Club of the American League.

According to a special order issued today by Major Gen. W. A. Mann, parade and reviews are to begin next Sunday for regimental organizations, and will be repeated on the following Sunday. There will be brigade reviews on the third Sunday and a grand review of the entire division on the fourth Sunday. Battalion parades will take place every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

HOW WOMEN AID SAILORS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The women composing the Comforts Committee of the Navy League have distributed more than 200,000 garments to men in the naval service. The activity of this committee is shown by the fact that it has organized more than 700 units and has 50,000 patriotic women working for it. The Daughters of the Revolution and other organizations are co-operating with the Comforts Committee in the work.

A New York branch of the Comforts Committee has been established at 569 Fifth Avenue, under the direction of Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee. The Comforts Committee of the Militia of Mercy has also opened headquarters in New York at 4 West Forty-ninth Street, under the Chairmanship of Mrs. W. S. Topham. Mrs. John Hays Hammond is President of the Militia of Mercy, and some of its members are Mrs. Robert Lansing, Mrs. Champ Clark, and Mrs. E. M. House.

The Comforts Committee's general work is in charge of a committee in Washington consisting of Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Chairman; Mrs. Sidney Ballou, Vice Chairman, and Mrs. John Callan O'Loughlin, Secretary. Its membership includes such well-known women as Mrs. Thomas F. Bayard, Mrs. Lars Anderson, Mrs. Gullan James, Mrs. Robert M. Thompson, Mrs. John W. Weeks, and Mrs. William Littauer.

ALL ARMY CAMPS CONNECTED BY WIRE

CENTRALIZED AT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Completion of the new army cantonments, aviation fields, naval bases and other Government war projects will find them linked in a network of telegraph and telephone lines which will make possible instantaneous communication both with the department authorities at Washington and among themselves. Hundreds of miles of pole line have been and are still being built to assist in the mobilization of the nation, and both trained men and material are being added daily to the many branches of the Government requiring increased communication facilities. Washington is the nerve centre of a constantly growing system of wires radiating in every direction to the scenes of the national activities.

The work of the telegraph and telephone companies in improving Government communication has been directed chiefly through the Committee on Telegraphs and Telephones of the Council of National Defense, of which Theodore N. Vail is Chairman, and which acts under the general supervision of Daniel Willard, Chairman of the Committee on Transportation and Communication. Mr. Willard today authorized the following statement on the extraordinary progress of the strategic and emergency development of the nation's communication lines:

"It is a striking tribute to the science of communication," Mr. Willard said, "that a country so vast can be knit so closely together as the United States is at present by its telegraph and telephone lines. The work of telephone and telegraph companies is the more remarkable because it has been accomplished in the face of a greatly increased demand for commercial service. Despite obstacles which seemed at times insuperable, the Government's emergency requirements have been met, although with some inconvenience to commercial service, never with real hardship.

"Wherever Government construction projects are going forward the telephone and telegraph systems have been called in to place them in quick contact with the department centres, and in the case of cantonments and training camps to establish permanent telephone systems, both internal and external, for the convenience of the department authorities. For additional circuits already completed it has been necessary to provide about 440 miles of copper wire, and to build 112 miles of new pole line.

AUSTRIA SAVING FUEL.

Enforces Strictest Economy and May Stop Street Cars.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9.—The Austrian Government has just put into effect stringent regulations to limit the consumption of fuel. The available supply of coal, coke, and briquettes will be distributed on the card system to prevent a recurrence of the conditions of last Winter, when, according to the text of the announcement, "large classes of the population were for weeks without this heating material, exposed to the inclemencies of the weather."

The regulations provide that a maximum of three rooms and a kitchen in private houses may be heated and lighted. Heating before Oct. 15 is prohibited. The warm water plants in hotels and residences are to be operated only on Saturdays. Moving picture houses, clubs, bars, and vaudeville houses are not to be heated. Hotels, clubs, and similar places of resort must close at 10 P. M.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

The violent setback suffered by last week's stock market was explainable on a number of grounds, but all reasons resolve themselves, in the last analysis, to the necessity for readjusting all forms of business activity to meet the heavy drain put upon this nation by its European enterprise. Both rails and industrials lost a great deal of ground in the week's selling, but the declines were so timed that there was never any suggestion of serious trouble in the banking situation. The outstanding features of the week were the severe setback suffered by the Allies through the collapse of the Russian defense, with the attendant break in rubles to a new low level under 17 cents; an advance in call money in this market to 6 per cent. following publication of the previous week's bank statement showing the smallest surplus reserves reported since the installation of the new currency system; the rejection by the Senate of radical proposals looking to imposition of exorbitant taxes on excess profits, and the appearance of a number of less satisfactory railroad earnings statements. The market was depressed not alone by the activities of a powerful bear party but by the accompanying liquidation of a large amount of investment stocks which were brought out, partly by growing uneasiness over the railroad outlook and partly by fears that the new war measures may take away an unfair proportion of net earnings and inflict supertaxes on large incomes so calculated as to make it uncomfortable for wealthy investors to carry taxable securities.

The mental depression into which the financial district fell last week has not been equaled in years. A feeling of resentment had been allowed to develop against the Washington authorities, who have been, perhaps unjustly, represented as believing that capital has no right to be heard in the discussion of ways and means of financing the war. The despondency was alleviated to some extent by the decisive vote with which the Senate answered La Follette and others of the radicals, who sought to incorporate into the new revenue measure excess profits taxes which would have almost certainly resulted in an immediate slowing down of the wheels of commerce. There was a marked improvement in sentiment observable at the end of the week, when it became fairly well established in the public mind that the Administration is going to allow the fixing of fair prices for steel and copper. While the matter is still subject to determination, expectations of the producers are that this and foreign Governments will purchase copper at 25 cents and steel at about $68 a ton. The conservative element in the Senate was strengthened by the warning seen in the rapid drop in security values, and it is reasonably certain that Congress will exercise moderation in levying the new taxes, both upon business and upon individual incomes.

There has also been a renewed feeling of discouragement over the outlook for an early ending of the war. This is due largely to the failure of Russia to make good her promise of a few months ago of a rehabilitation of the army that would permit the resumption of the abandoned offensive campaign. While it is idle to speculate on what might have been, it is clear now that had Russia been able to stand firm with Great Britain and France the end of the war might be at hand today, for the Italian drive has shown how nearly exhausted the Austrians are, and the British and French have been steadily winning back positions on the western front. The U-boats continue to exact their heavy toll, but they are losing the race against time, and the confident promise of starving Great Britain will in all probability never be fulfilled, even though the land operations by the Allies require more time than has been conceded. The effect upon the stock market has been seen in an advance in the cost of money and increased difficulties of accomplishing corporation financing. The insatiable demands of the war are consuming investment funds at the expense of all forms of private enterprise. The longer the war goes on the more difficult it must prove to finance business undertakings. New construction has been practically halted by this consideration and by the greatly increased cost of both materials and labor. Labor has become independent, and there is a pronounced shortage even for work that can be done at the fanciful costs now exacted. There are some indications observable which lead to the hope that this situation cannot grow much worse. The cessation of normal expansion plans of the corporations and the completion of the great army cantonments should in some measure offset the depletion of the labor supply by the absorption of men into the army and work associated with keeping the army supplied.

It is expected that the second issue of Liberty bonds will be $3,000,000,000, carrying interest at 4 per cent., and that it will be publicly offered on Oct. 1. It is fervently hoped by bankers that financial conditions will enjoy a marked improvement before that date for the sake of the success of the offering. Shrewd students of the stock market conclude that buying of the best kind was under way last week, particularly in the steel and copper issues, and it may be that the work of the bond salesmen will be greatly facilitated by a more cheerful market tone when the real work of distribution is started.

LONDON SENTIMENT BETTER.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Financial sentiment, which had been much depressed owing to the loss of Riga, improved toward the end of last week on better advices from well-informed quarters in Russia, Lloyd George's cheerful speech at Birkenhead, and the Italian successes.

Sales of new Treasury bills last week rose to £23,000,000, while the Exchequer is were also in slightly better demand. Talk of a premium bond issue has been revived. That the fiscal authorities will decide to bring out such an issue is considered likely in good quarters. Money was rather less abundant this week, though nothing approaching a scarcity was in evidence. Discount business was rather quiet, except in Treasury bills, and some activity in Russian and Italian credit bills at 4⅝ to 4⅜ per cent.

Stock Exchange business was of moderate volume, the outstanding feature being the flatness of Russian securities of all kinds. Such demand as appeared was concentrated chiefly on industrial securities, including explosives, armament, meat, tobacco, nitrate, rubber, and textile shares.

The scheme for restricting the output of cotton 40 per cent. comes into operation Monday. For three months spinners engaged on American cotton will not be allowed to run more than 70 per cent. of capacity. No such restriction applies to Egyptian spinning or weaving. Official announcement is made of details of the control of flour and bread. The wholesale price for flour is fixed at 44s. 3d. per 280 pounds, and the retail price at 50s.

Lloyd's Register shows that over 100 new steamers were put in service between June 8 and July 17, 63 of which were British. Most of them were of large tonnage.

BOURSE PRICES RECOVER.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The Bourse opened weak on Monday with continued sales of Russian securities on the unsatisfactory military and political news. The fall of Riga, however, was discounted, and thereafter the market recovered to some extent. The close was steady, with a firmer tendency, which was shown in some Russian industrials as well as in other securities.

Shipping shares remained in demand. In this group the following advances for the week were recorded: Compagnie Transatlantique 40 francs, Messageries 10 francs, Chargeurs Reunis 135 francs. There was a general advance in colliery shares. Coppers, other metal issues, electrical shares, and war stocks generally were firm. Hotchkiss gained a further 10 francs. War loan bonds closed at 88 and rentes at 62.80.

Beginning on Oct. 6 it will be compulsory for bankers to register the details of all foreign exchange operations. The declaration of all French holdings of securities in enemy countries is also made obligatory. The credit asked by the Government to cover the last quarter of this year amounts to 11,200,000,000 francs, the highest figure yet reached during the war.

The gold held by the Bank of France amounts to 5,276,772,600 francs; the amount held abroad is unchanged. The war advances of the bank increased 100,000,000 francs, and the advances to allied Governments increased 10,000,000 francs.

Income Tax Exempt and Safest

A new schedule of Income Taxes to be levied upon incomes in excess of $1,000 and $2,000 and increasing those already in force, is expected to be fixed by Congress in the near future.

When levying taxes upon incomes, the Government recognizes only two classes as exempt—its own and municipal obligations.

CALL FOR WOMEN WORKERS.

Five Places for Every Applicant, Clearing House Announces.

There is no need for any woman in New York to be out of work; there are five jobs open for every applicant, according to the Employment Clearing House of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, 6 East Thirty-ninth Street, which issued a notice yesterday of the large number of positions open.

The girl or woman who wants a job is asked to register at the Free Employment Agency nearest her home, and the application will be reported to the Clearing House. A bulletin published daily notifies every employment agency of the requests for workers. A statement issued by the managers of the Clearing House yesterday said:

"Where are all the girls who used to want jobs and couldn't get them? There are opportunities now for them to learn almost any trade they desire, at a minimum wage of $6 a week while they are learning. There are vacancies for learners in stockrooms, showrooms, labeling, embroidery, waists, underwear, clothing, and jewelry manufactories. Manicurists and hairdressers are asked for at weekly salaries of from $6 to $10. Machine operators are offered from $6 to $20. A score of girls could be placed as beginners in millinery if they were only at hand. The demand for waitresses in hotels and hospitals and kitchen and pantry workers in hospitals is so great that the supply falls utterly to meet the demand.

"It is a patriotic duty in these days for women to work and release their husbands and brothers for military duty. An ywork is not a duty merely—it opens the door to opportunity and freedom. Now that vacation time is over, it is hoped that there will soon be candidates enough to relieve a situation which is making it difficult for employers to carry on their business.

CAMP AT YAPHANK A THIRD COMPLETED

FAR BEHIND OTHER CAMPS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Detailed information regarding the status of work on the national army cantonments made public by the War Department tonight shows that Camp Upton, under construction at Yaphank, L. I., where most of the New York City selective draft army men will be trained, is hardly more than one-third finished.

The information made public tonight took the form of a report submitted by the War Industries Board to Secretary Baker through Lieut. Col. P. E. Pierce of the General Staff, a member of the board, showing the status of the cantonments on Sept. 1.

"On investigation," says the report of Colonel Pierce, "I believe that conditions are understated, rather than overstated, and that in general the report is very reliable."

The percentage of completion of the company barracks at the various cantonments on Sept. 1 shows that those at Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., were 88 per cent.; at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., 94 per cent.; Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., 100 per cent.; Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., 100 per cent.; Camp Meade, Annapolis Junction, Md., 44 per cent.; Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J., 74 per cent.; Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., 70 per cent.; Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., 90 per cent.; Camp Pike, Little Rock, Ark., 96 per cent.; Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I., 38 per cent.; Camp Travis, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, 100 per cent.; Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa, 74 per cent.; Camp Funston, Fort Riley, Kan., 80 per cent.; Camp Lewis, American Lawe, Wash., 95 per cent., and Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, 93½ per cent.

The report shows that 68,176 workmen were employed on Sept. 1 in rushing the work on eight of the cantonments. These workmen were distributed: At Yaphank, 10,290; at Columbia, 10,029; at Ayer, 7,891; at Annapolis Junction, 9,140; at Wrightstown, 8,300; at Atlanta, 5,520; at Petersburg, 8,713, and at Little Rock, 8,383.

The draft army men from New York City and State will be sent to three cantonments, part going to Ayer, the New York City men to Yaphank, and the rest to Wrightstown. The detailed report on conditions at Yaphank shows its status on Sept. 1 was as follows:

Materials.—Frame lumber, 92 per cent.; boards, 100 per cent.; flooring, 69 per cent.; finish lumber, 76 per cent.; sash and doors, 42 per cent.; hardware, 94 per cent.

GEN. BELL READY FOR FIRST YAPHANK QUOTA

Names Officers Who Will Receive New York Men on Their Arrival Today.

The first contingent of New York City's quota of selective draft men will leave at 10 o'clock this morning for Camp Upton, there to begin their duties as soldiers of the national army of the United States. On the special trains which leave Long Island City and the Flatbush Avenue Station in Brooklyn will go 2,020 men from New York City. With them will also go 112 men from Dutchess, Westchester, and Putnam Counties. En route they will be joined by 95 national army recruits from Suffolk and Nassau Counties. The total strength of the contingent is 2,227 men.

The men will report to their various district boards at 7:30 o'clock this morning to receive final instructions before departing for the cantonment. Following the mobilization the drafted man who will be in command during the journey to Camp Upton will be announced. The men will travel forty-five to a coach, and the schedules of the railroad have been so arranged as to make it reasonably certain that all of the specials will arrive at Camp Upton promptly on time.

Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, in command at Camp Upton, has completed all arrangements for the reception of the men on their arrival. Forty-nine officers have been ordered to meet the selective draft men, each group of three officers being charged with the reception of the men from about seventeen local exemption districts. Nine other officers have been assigned to receive the 600 regulars who are also due at Camp Upton today.

Meet Them in Buses.

The officers who have been placed in command of the men will meet them on their arrival at Melford station in buses which will be provided by the Quartermaster of Camp Upton. The order issued by General Bell outlines the procedure which will be followed in the transfer of New York's first contingent from civilian to military life. That order, as given out by Mr. Conkling yesterday, reads in part as follows:

"The officers will proceed to Melford station in buses provided by the Division Quartermaster on Monday, Sept. 10, in time to meet the several sections of the troop train. One officer will board each car at that point and carry out detailed instructions of the Casual Officer, which will include instructions covering disembarking from train and distribution of district contingents to barracks. Upon the completion of this duty these officers will report to their regimental commanders.

"When the districts are reported to their barracks the officers in charge and their assistants will collect from the district leaders the lists giving the names of the men from each district and the individual registration cards of members thereof. Each man will then be conducted to his bunk and the number of his bunk noted in pencil on his registration card. His mess kit and bedding will be turned over to him, and he will be told that he is responsible for all articles issued him. He will also be told that he must not leave the barracks until told that he can do so. As soon as all the districts have arrived, and not later than 2 P. M., dinner will be served the men.

"The individual registration cards will be divided among the three officers of the barrack, and as soon as the men have had their dinner each officer will call up singly the men whose registration cards he has and obtain from each the following information, which will be noted on his registration card:

(a) Previous occupation. (An effort will be made to ascertain trade or profession applicable to military service in which the man has had the most experience.)

(b) His preference as to branches of the service. (If a man asks for the information, officers will patiently and fully explain to him the characteristics of the different arms.)

(c) Name and address of person to be notified in case of accident.

"During the afternoon and evening this information will be classified under the several headings as regards 'occupation' and 'preference of branch of service,' so as to show the total number of men of each occupation and the total number of men preferring each of the several branches of the service. This list and the registration cards will be delivered to the mustering officer, Lieut. Col. Jewell, by 8 A. M. Sept. 11.

One Officer Always in Barracks.

"As soon as the above information has been obtained the men will be advised of the location of the post exchange and told that they can buy for cash such articles as are enumerated in Paragraph 19 as they desire. As soon as men have been assigned to organizations, credit will be extended to them, bills to be settled on first pay day.

"The officers in charge of each barracks will be in charge of the men assigned to their barracks until they are turned over to the organizations to which they are permanently assigned, and will be responsible:

(a) That proper meals are served on time.

(b) That the barracks are properly policed.

(c) That each man take a bath between the time of reporting and 7 o'clock the following morning.

(d) That proper discipline is maintained in the barracks.

(e) That men are required to fall in for reveille and retreat roll calls and required to be in their barracks for check roll call at 11 P. M. and are given such exercise as directed by the Casual Officer.

(f) That one officer is in the barracks at all times, both day and night.

(g) That all men are marched under an officer to the hospital at sick call daily.

(h) That an alphabetical list of names of all men in each barracks is furnished the post office, the telephone office, and the telegraph office by 5 P. M. Sept. 10.

(i) That at an agreed time within twenty-four hours after assignment to permanent organizations, that the men assigned to each organization are marched to the barracks designated and turned over to the Commanding Officer with a list showing the name of each man. A copy of this list will also be furnished the Post Exchange Officer.

At 7:30 A. M. tomorrow morning the physical examination of the men, by regular army surgeons, will begin, the examination to be followed by vaccination for smallpox and inoculation against typhoid. Those who may be found deficient or below the standard will be sent home.

Several of the local boards gave dinners last night to those of their quotas who have been chosen to leave for Camp Upton this morning.

The Citizens' Welfare Committee of the east side gave every east sider who is going to Camp Upton today a kit yesterday, which contained a tooth brush, tooth paste, a cake of soap, a drinking cup, pipe, tobacco and cigarettes, needles and thread, and two pairs of warm socks.

G. W. PERKINS, JR., TO LEAD.

Board Selects Him to Conduct Other Drafted Men to Yaphank.

George W. Perkins, Jr., was selected by Local Board 22, with headquarters at Jerome Avenue and Fordham Road, to act as leader until the drafted men reach camp at Yaphank today. He lived at his father's estate at Riverdale and registered in the Bronx, with several other young men from country homes in the Fordham and Riverdale sections. Although the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. sought to obtain the exemption of Perkins, he told the board he was willing to go as a soldier and would not claim exemption to work for the Y. M. C. A. in France, and he was certified for service. He is 22 years old, and is 6 feet 2 inches in height, with a physique developed by rowing at Princeton.

Among the honor men from District 18, at 162nd Street and Morris Avenue, are Bernard O'Neill, 24, and his brother, Arthur, 23, of 3,564 Park Avenue. Both men were certified for service among the first men in their district and when Bernard was called to go to Yaphank in the first contingent, Arthur pleaded with his board to send him along also. The seven other members of the O'Neill family, none of them of draft age, gathered last night for a farewell to the drafted boys. Mrs. O'Neill told visitors she did not want her boys to go to war, but that she believed it was the duty of every American family to aid the country in the prosecution of the war.

"There are only two in this household who can fight in the front line trenches," said Mrs. O'Neill. "The country has asked for them and they go without protest, although we would prefer to have them home at work of peace. The others are too old or too young, but we can get along without the financial assistance of the boys, and the country needs them."

MORE ARTILLERY FOR 27TH.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Sept. 9.—The plans for the reorganization of the Twenty-seventh Division along the lines to which it must conform before departure for France have been worked out by Colonel Harry H. Bandholtz, Chief of Staff.

A substantial increase has been made in the number of machine guns to be included in the division. A large number of trench mortar batteries have been provided for, and to make arrangements for special instruction in this branch a staff officer left last night for a seaboard army post where courses in this branch are being held.

Working with high enthusiasm, the troops recently arrived in camp had their entire camp ready for occupancy within five hours, and were complimented for their fine work by the inspecting officers, Lieut. Col. Sternberger, Lieut. Col. Wainwright, and Major Leslie Kincaid.

In anticipation of the beginning of hard work tomorrow with the opening of the "post graduate course" which General O'Ryan has ordained for the reserve officers assigned to the Twenty-seventh Division, these officers spent their last hours of leisure touring the country today.

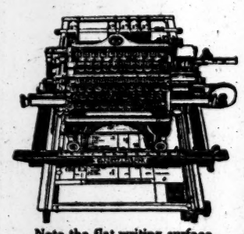
Proof

Double-entry bookkeeping was developed so the bookkeeper could take off a trial balance to prove the accuracy of his work.

But double-entry bookkeeping is slow and tedious work. Inaccuracies require hours and days, sometimes even weeks, to locate and correct. Such old-fashioned bookkeeping methods are out of date today, when going concerns must close their books promptly on the last day of the month in order to get bills and statements out on the first.

Executives now demand "proof" daily that all work is correct, that they may keep in constant touch with the debit and credit movements of the business.

The continuous, itemized proof sheet which Elliott-Fisher furnishes, automatically provides typewritten proof of all the work all the time. Because of the infallible accuracy of Elliott-Fisher The Bookkeeping Machine, trial balance troubles are eliminated, which makes it possible to send on-time statements daily, weekly or monthly.



Note the flat writing surface on which forms are held in the natural flat writing position. This makes the proof sheet possible.

Nearly 5,000 American business houses, in all lines of business, have installed Elliott-Fisher Bookkeeping Machines in the past two years. We have on file hundreds of letters from satisfied users testifying to the value of Elliott-Fisher The Bookkeeping Machine and proving the claims of what it does as an economizer of time and energy and as an eliminator of human bookkeeping worries.

There are Elliott-Fisher offices in all principal cities and a 'phone call or letter to your local office will bring without cost to you full particulars about the possible application of Elliott-Fisher to your business. Address Elliott-Fisher Company, 217 Broadway.
